Seeley G. meets the The Olivetti ET 121

by Sean McCollum

There is a new addition to the Lawrence University Library. A fancy-fangled typewriter that will make your old kludgy-cranker sniff your fingers in envy. The Olivetti ET 121 has arrived.

Librarian Kathy Isaacson was approached last term by Bill Mauer, an employee of Appleton Business Machines, with the idea of providing students with an accessible typewriter.

Thus ET found a home on the second floor of the library.

This mercenary writing machine continues to be owned and serviced by Appleton Business Machines in return for the quarters it consumes. The only doing Lawrence does is to periodically change the ribbon. One librarian quoted as saying, "If the typewriter groans, be prepared for it (ABM) then they may install another. Twenty-five cents purchases fifteen minutes of typing time.

The machine itself is a technological wonder. Once the user becomes beyond the intimidating list of instructions and the complicated lack of the keyboard the typewriter is a joy to operate. Its one drawback is its lack of warning before shutting down after its fifteen minutes.

For the average 6-8 page theme composer the typewriter does everything necessary plus more. Its tab-setting is quite flexible and allows for programming of automatic indentation. Corrections are simplistic, simply requiring backspacing of the error and a push of one or two keys. Centering is accurate and unmathematical. The typewriter also features two sets of type for the student who needs to hedge.

For students of German or Spanish the Olivetti ET 121 possesses a second keyboard which carries the various symbols necessary to write in that language. Accents, special punctuation, and special characters are present.

It takes about one fifteen minutes to become well-oriented with this typewriter's abilities. But once learned the machine will save time, frustration, and a heck of a lot of paper.

From Luther to Hitler

Could the Germany of Martin Luther and Adolf Hitler be linked by a 400-year political myth? A thesis supporting this theory will be presented by Thomas A. Brady, Jr., in a Jan. 17 convocation lecture at Lawrence University.

"From Luther to Hitler: A Political Myth and its Makers"

The convocation will be held at 11:10 a.m. at Lawrence Memorial Chapel. The public is invited to attend.

Brady, a professor of history at the University of Oregon and recent Fulbright Scholar, has researched and published works on South German culture, society and politics during the 16th and 17th centuries. His current research includes the examination of urban aristocratic politics in South Germany during the Renaissance and the images of Luther in Modern Germany.

Taylor: de Professor Latina

by Parke Drescher

In late December, Daniel J. Taylor, associate professor of classics at Lawrence was in Philadelphia, Pa., receiving an award for excellence in the teaching of the classics.

The award was presented to Mr. Taylor by the American Philological Association (APA), one of the nation's oldest learned societies. Taylor's nomination for the award was supported by J. Michael Hack, dean of the Lawrence faculty, Lawrence President Richard Warch, Professor of Religion Leonard L. Thompson and Martha Krohr Stevenson, a former student of Taylor's at Lawrence. The APA received the nominations submitted in seven geographic regions in the United States and Canada and, unlike previous years, presented only three prizes instead of the usual seven.

Mr. Taylor was also one out of the four Lawrence graduates who presented scholarly papers at the 114th annual meeting of the APA. He said that, "I was impressed and proud of Lawrence when I saw the names on the agenda." Mr. Taylor is candid in stating that he feels that the teaching he received and the type of work he did as an undergraduate at Lawrence inspired him to continue his career as a classical teacher. The encouragement of his instructor, Maurice P. Cunningham was instrumental in launching his successful career in classics and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University of Washington.

For six years he taught at the University of Illinois before his appointment to the Lawrence faculty in 1974. "I am a better teacher and scholar because of what I did here," Taylor happily concedes.

Mr. Taylor highly values the scholarship which he has received and the type of work he feels that the teaching he received and the type of work he did as an undergraduate at Lawrence inspired him to continue his career as a classical teacher.

Librarian Kathy Isaacson welcomed Kreher Stevenson, a former Lawrence student, to a program on "Stark" in Boxman Hall Monday evening at 4:10 p.m. The program is sponsored by the近期_auxiliary/section English Club and the Lawrence International Club.

Public Service Announcement

Since its opening January 3rd, the Information Desk located in the basement of the Union, has been warmly welcomed by the Lawrence Community. Several of the main services include checking and changing numbers are being utilized regularly.

More new services are being added as the Information Desk strives to centralize existing and new services and information.

Early on in Term I, the Campus Life staff perceived a need for an on campus-central source of information for students, faculty and staff. Out of this developed the concept of an information counter.

The Information Desk was realized early during the Christmas break, initially the desk opened with a minimum of services such as checking copies of "810 limits,

But I noticed that he walked on after giving her a confi­dent embrace. I headed over to the office of Pope Pontius Page WLFM. There is another glow of Wild Turkey and that's it. A cou­ple of drinks later, I asked to borrow one of the platters of tele­phones the Pope had ready and waiting for Trivia. He in­structed me to go to the Mail Room before I called Michael O. And then disappeared. I did not understand his advice, nor do I realize what he said, but the last time I would I see the Pope for quite a while, but I didn't dare question his wisdom.

Finishing my drink, I decided to step by Doc Chang's on my way over to the Mail Room. This time, however, I entered his office casually. He address­ed me confidently, saying "I thought I'd seen the last of you, Weed, mm-hmm," "You'll have a better bank than this, mm-hmm," and a new hideout as well.

Doc: But tell me, why did you do it?" Chang was: "It was a Curious, feel again, mm-hmm! If you must know, I was seeking revenge, mm-hmm, since you stopped me two years ago, and I'll still get it too. It worked for a time, but I see you just can't get rid of the lookings, mm-hmm." Regain­ing his cool, Chang continued, "But don't forget Weed, mm-hmm, but they haven't won a single game in town.

Duo to tickle ivories

The piano duo of Aebersold-Newewm will present a program of duet music for one and two pianos in the second concert of Lawrence University's 1982-83 Chamber Music Series Friday, Jan. 28 at 8 p.m. in Harper Hall at the Music-Drama Center, 115 N. Park Ave.

Tickets are $4.50 for students and adults over 85 and $6 for all others, and are available at the Lawrence Box Office, 115 N. Park Ave.

The duo was formed in 1970 when the two young pianists met at the international music festival "Giornate Musicale" in Italy. Since that time they have performed more than 100 recitals in Italy alone, as well as numerous concerts throughout the United States. They have been praised by the critics for their distinctive style and for the imagination and elegance of their interpretations. Both pianists completed their graduate studies at Northwestern University and are presently Dux-Rosidence at the Music Center of the North American Bantiscan area.

The concert will include the Fantasia in F Minor, D. 940 by Franz Schubert, and will be followed by Johannes Brahms' Hungarian Dance No. 6 in E-flat Major, and Scarlattia by Darius Milhaud. The duo will also perform Six Epigraphs Antiques by Claude Debussy. The program will close with Franz Liszt's "Concerto Faschis- que."

Tickets for the Jan. 28 concert may be reserved by calling the Lawrence Box Office at 755-6748.
