ON THE COVER:

A birds-eye-view of Lawrence University shows a blend of the college's rich history and vibrant new development. The numbers identify places with an exciting story to tell — which will be shared (along with many others) in the pages that follow.

DEAR LAWRENTIANS,

Much like the students who graduate from Lawrence University each year, this institution, too, is on a path of continuous transformation. The core remains unchanged — an abiding commitment to the ideals of liberal learning — and our mission statement and educational philosophy are the anchors to the university's traditions and reason for being, providing guidance to the administration and faculty as we move into the second decade of the millennium.

Lawrence today, however, is not your grandfather's (or grandmother's) Lawrence University and it should not be so. The challenge for Lawrence, as is the challenge for Lawrentians who are graduating into an ever-changing world, is to remain true to Lawrence University traditions and ideals while innovating and moving forward in new ways; leveraging what has made us strong and making the leap to even greater levels of distinction.

In 2005, shortly after I arrived at Lawrence, the Board of Trustees, faculty and administration resolved to take a critical look at where Lawrence was as an institution, and identify any obstacles that might be standing in the way of Lawrence transforming from the strong institution it has been to recognition as a truly distinguished liberal arts college. We discussed the strength of Lawrence's academic programs and the quality of the residential experience. We talked about the need for sufficient financial resources to support greater innovation. We explored ideas for promoting the university and raising its visibility nationally and considered the challenges in recruiting and retaining the right students. The result was a 23-page strategic plan that launched an endeavor to bring to the fore the remarkable achievements of Lawrence University, its students and faculty.

In 2010, we are very proud that considerable progress has been made in the past five years and that our work is producing distinguished results. We have significant momentum on our side as we welcome the Class of 2014.

Because transformation is an unending process, not a task to be checked off a list when completed, it is safe to say we are eager to do more. The Lawrence faculty and administration are now at work developing the next strategic plan, and the university's pursuit of continued excellence will intensify. We are also debating the criteria upon which universities are evaluated and identifying our own preferred criteria for evaluating Lawrence University's success and standing in American higher education.

As I present this annual report to alumni, donors and friends, it seems appropriate to recognize the remarkable achievements that have been realized (regrettably, it is impossible to cite them all in this magazine) and to thank each of you for your personal support of Lawrence University. It has been a highly collaborative effort.

Sincerely,

Jill Beck Ph.D.
President, Lawrence University

Lawrence Momentum — 50 ways the university is stronger in 2010

Five years ago, Lawrence administration, faculty and the Board of Trustees embarked upon the tasks of assessing the degree to which Lawrence University was achieving its mission and determining what, if any, obstacles were standing in the way. The result was a 23-page strategic plan that for the past five years has intensified the university's focus on the ideas set forth in the mission statement.

At the center of the strategic plan were three principles: excellence, innovation and collaboration. "We have always known, and have been proud of the fact, that Lawrence is a strong academic institution," said President Jill Beck. "We also recognize that we must continue to build on Lawrence's strengths and work collaboratively to develop new, innovative approaches for successfully preparing today's students for lives of achievement, responsible and meaningful citizenship, and lifelong learning.

How well Lawrence succeeds in achieving its mission, according to Beck, may be measured in many ways, among them:

- The strength of the faculty
- Innovation in the curriculum
- The quality of the educational experience

- The strength of the student body
- Diversity
- Financial strength
- Volunteerism and civic engagement
- Global learning
- The quality of university facilities
- Alumni and constituency engagement

The quest to fulfill the promise of Lawrence's mission, and continuously build on success, has been described by some as moving Lawrence from strong to distinguished. Seasoned Lawrence alumni might also see these 50 examples as evidence that The Lawrence Difference is better than ever.

Lawrence University Faculty, 2010-11

1 Exceptional Faculty

Faculty scholarship and a commitment to teaching are the lifeblood of any learning community. An influx of new faculty, with research interests ranging from revolutionary studies and computational chemistry to medieval Arabic literature and multi-media composition, have brought fresh ideas, energies, abilities and knowledge to the campus, enriching an already strong and extremely dedicated faculty.

In the last five years, 36 new tenure-track faculty have been hired, accounting for more than a quarter of all such faculty positions. The infusion of novel interests and perspectives has generated new courses, tutorial offerings, interdisciplinary programs and research opportunities, adding vibrancy to the entire Lawrence community.

2 Senior Experience

For more than 60 years, Freshman Studies has helped define a Lawrence education. Beginning with the class of 2012, all seniors will be required to complete a capstone project that will further characterize their distinct liberal arts education by demonstrating proficiency in their major field of study.

Supported by a $350,000 grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, the Senior Experience will engage every student in a significant project that reflects an integration of knowledge and skills gained at Lawrence while demonstrating the development of scholarly or artistic independence. The culminating educational experience will be personal to each student as well as universal to students across disciplines and departments.

"When the Senior Experience is fully implemented, and if we have the proper funding, the campus will be almost electric," said Thomas Ryckman, professor of philosophy, who served as Senior Experience director from 2008 to 2010. "There will be a discernable amount of excitement involving these projects. People can be confident that the work these students do will be of very high quality and considerable sophistication."

A natural extension of Lawrence's culture of individualized learning, the requirements for Senior Experience projects will be established by individual departments. Ryckman is confident that the Senior Experience will prove memorable and valuable to students later in their lives.

"Whenever they're facing a difficult challenge and asking themselves whether they're up to it, they can look back on their Senior Experience and realize they do, in fact, have what it takes to tackle anything," said Ryckman. "That's the kind of impact I see this program having on our students." Peter Blitstein, associate professor of history, was named the new director of the Senior Experience as of September 2010.

Outstanding Student Achievement

In the past five years, Lawrence students have received a record number of national awards. Whether it's Rotary Ambassadorial Scholarships, Thomas Watson Fellowships or Fulbright Fellowships, scientific or musical success, Lawrence students have been recognized often for outstanding achievement.

Lawrence Scholars in Business

A summer in San Francisco spent developing quantitative financial models for Thompson Reuters and integrating them with the company's data-feed engine provided an experience Syed Abbas '11 called "the highlight of my Lawrence career." With the help of David Eddy '81, Abbas landed the internship after being named a Lawrence Scholar in Business (LSB) scholarship recipient.

"My work was directly in line with my interests and post-graduation aspirations. The knowledge and the experience I gained through this position is simply priceless. I am sincerely grateful to the LSB program," said Abbas, a math and economics major from Lahore, Pakistan.

The brainchild of Lawrence Trustee Bob Perille '80, the LSB program engages alumni who are working in the business and financial sectors. They share their experience with students in half-day, on-campus seminars about everything from marketing and branding to business ethics and leadership.

While entrepreneurial ventures and investment banking may seem like topics more suitable for the Harvard Business School course catalogue, the two-year-old program is proving the perfect complement to the college's strong liberal arts and sciences roots.

"LSB provides both exposure and experiential learning opportunities for Lawrence students who wish to apply their critical thinking, communication and analytical skills to careers in business," said Merton Finkler, professor of economics and John R. Kimberly Distinguished Professor in the American Economic System, one of the coordinators of the program. "It helps students understand how success in the liberal arts can translate to leadership in many different industries."

Beyond introducing students to business leaders, LSB has successfully attracted students who otherwise might not have any idea that a career in business is appropriate for them, especially Conservatory of Music students.

Katelin Richter '11, a double-degree candidate with majors in music performance (oboe) and German, was awarded an LSB scholarship after excelling in the economics courses she took as a result of LSB seminars.

Richter landed a competitive internship with one of Europe's largest music festivals. Her long-term goals now include becoming a CEO in the arts management field.

In the program's two years, 39 alumni have shared their expertise with more than 100 students in 12 business-focused seminars.

"We are gaining momentum," said Perille. "We've diversified our summit offerings and the new topics were huge hits among students with majors outside of economics and math. Our alumni summit leaders have been fantastic and the faculty and administration incredibly supportive. LSB is distinguishing Lawrence from other liberal arts colleges and raising the college's visibility."

Concert for Haiti

Lawrence University and Port-au-Prince, Haiti, are separated by more than 2,200 miles. But, when a staggering 7.0 magnitude earthquake rocked the island nation on January 12, the reverberations were felt throughout the Lawrence campus — nowhere more strongly than in the office of Professor of Music Janet Anthony.

In the midst of the destruction, the four-story Holy Trinity Music School, where Anthony and her students have been volunteer music teachers for more than a decade, was a one-story pile of rubble.

Eight days after the quake, Anthony and her students, with the assistance of many other Lawrence students, faculty and staff, hosted the "Concert for Haiti," which attracted hundreds and, with the support of a local television station, was streamed live on the Web and rebroadcast in the days following.

The concert raised nearly $40,000, of which more than $11,000 was specifically donated for Holy Trinity Music School. The remainder was earmarked for American Red Cross relief efforts.

Thomas Steitz '62, Nobel Prize Winner

Lawrence University made headlines around the world in October 2009, when alumnus Thomas A. Steitz '62 was awarded the Nobel Prize in Chemistry. Steitz and two others received the honor for their research on the structure and the function of the ribosome.

To mark the occasion, Science Hall was formally renamed the Thomas A. Steitz Hall of Science and the Nobel laureate returned to campus June 13 to deliver Lawrence University's 161st commencement address. Catherine Albright '11 is the first recipient of the prestigious Thomas A. Steitz Nobel Fund for Senior Experience in the Natural Sciences (see page 64).

The Warch Campus Center

The Warch Campus Center is undoubtedly one of the most important improvements to the Lawrence campus in decades. Now the center of student life, it creates a focal point that goes beyond a traditional student union. The Warch Campus Center is home to four dining options, numerous meeting and performance spaces, the Campus Life department, a cinema, art gallery and much more.

The building is accessible to students 24 hours a day, giving students, faculty and staff a place to meet and relax without concern for the hour. Isake Smith '11, a member of several student organizations on campus, believes that the Warch Campus Center has given students invaluable space. "Be it meeting space, storage space, party space or thinking space, many, if not all, student organizations have used the Warch Campus Center in some way, shape or form." She continued, "From meetings to poster parties, the Campus Center has been well used this past year, and will continue to be a big part of co-curricular activities."

In November 2009 the Warch Campus Center earned LEED Gold Certification, the U.S. Green Building Council's second-highest award level.

9 Kaleidoscope!

A 70-minute musical extravaganza involving virtually all Conservatory of Music students and faculty, Lawrence University's biennial Kaleidoscope concert is so multi-faceted and popular, it is held at Northeast Wisconsin's largest concert hall, the Fox Cities Performing Arts Center.

First presented in 2006, the nonstop performance has become the conservatory's most ambitious musical endeavor, with nearly 350 students and a dozen ensembles playing and singing from all corners of the theatre, including the main floor, upper and side balconies.

"It is designed to cover a broad spectrum of musical offerings and give the audience a sampling of everything from intimate chamber music and funky jazz to musical theatre and Brazilian percussion," said Andrew Mast, director of bands at Lawrence and the coordinator of the 2010 concert. "It's a special opportunity to perform in a beautiful hall like the Performing Arts Center."

The three Kaleidoscope concerts have played to nearly sold out audiences and have had rave reviews from students, alumni, parents and members of the Fox Cities community.

10 The Lawrence Fellows Program

Launched in 2005 with eight postdoctoral appointments, the Lawrence Fellows in the Liberal Arts and Sciences program is enhancing individualized instructional opportunities for students while addressing a national critical need of better preparing the next generation of faculty for teaching positions allied with undergraduate research.

"This program provides opportunities to explore exciting new curricular areas," said David Burrows, provost and dean of the faculty. "Fellows have created new courses in ethnomusicology, film studies, and in the near future, new media studies. These curricular innovations are important for the intellectual and creative vitality of the university. The program also helps young scholars develop the characteristics that will help them be successful as faculty."

Kevin Tracy (pictured above) was one of those young scholars who used the program to fast-track his career. Fresh from completing his Ph.D. at the University of Pennsylvania, Tracy joined the Lawrence classics department as a fellow in 2007. His two-year fellowship became a one-year appointment when Lawrence offered him a tenure-track position in 2008.

"The Lawrence Fellows Program accomplishes a mutual benefit seldom found in short-term academic employment," said Tracy. "As a fellow I had time to develop as a teacher and a scholar without a burdensome workload or the immediate pressure of the job market. At the same time, Lawrence strengthens its offerings with new course content and instructional approaches from a cache of talent that is continuously refreshed as the fellows finish their appointments. That I was fortunate enough to be offered a tenure-track position at Lawrence confirms that the program is good not only in conception but also in execution. I would be surprised if we don't see more small colleges following Lawrence's lead in this area."

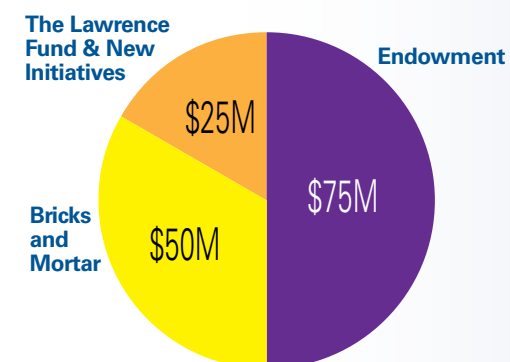

As a training ground for the professoriate of the future, the program has proven successful. Twelve of 19 former fellows have earned tenure-track positions at outstanding colleges and universities. Five others hold visiting assistant professor appointments. In addition to Tracy, three other former fellows have been hired by Lawrence: Adam Galambos holds a tenure-track appointment as an assistant professor of economics while fellows Sonja Downing and Alison Guenther-Pal have been appointed visiting assistant professors in music and German, respectively.

Enlightening Endeavor

Lawrence's $150 million More Light! campaign began its quiet phase in fiscal year 2006. By the time the public phase was launched in 2009, $104 million had already been raised, and since then, growth has been steady. The current total stands at $134 million — which is impressive, considering the unexpected economic downturn that is still gripping the country.

More Light! campaign priorities

The More Light! campaign had a positive impact on several of the college's fund-raising endeavors:

- The first year of the quiet phase resulted in a 144 percent increase in total annual gifts
- Gifts to The Lawrence Fund set new records during four out of five years
- Gifts totalling $19 million were designated for student scholarships
- $8 million was raised for endowed professorships
- The Björklunden endowment grew by $1.6 million
- Membership in Lawrence's Legacy Circle grew from 623 to 815
- All capital projects during the past five years were supported entirely with donations, including the Warch Campus Center, which benefitted from an anonymous donor's $16 million lead gift

"To achieve what Lawrence aspires to be we still need strong support from alumni and friends," said Trustee and Chair of the Investment Committee Terry Franke '68. "Exceeding or meeting our goals for the capital campaign is critical; as is continuing to build our endowment."

Seeing Green

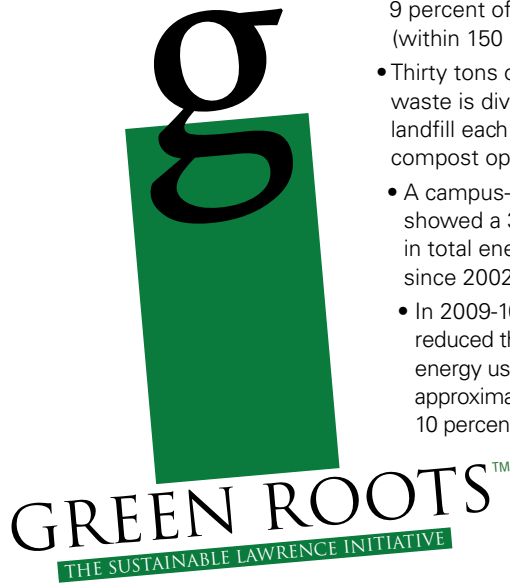

Green is the new blue at Lawrence University. While the official colors of the campus remain blue and white, the color that's creating a buzz among students, faculty and staff — and in news headlines — is the color associated with environmental sustainability and responsibility.

The Green Roots initiative, launched two years ago, was a catalyst for a new way of thinking on campus and a vehicle for uniting green-minded members of the Lawrence community who had previously been working independently to promote environmental responsibility. The results are impressive:

- Bon Appétit, Lawrence's foodservice partner, purchased 9 percent of its food locally (within 150 miles of campus)
- Thirty tons of kitchen-prep waste is diverted from the landfill each year to the SLUG compost operation (see #14)
- A campus-wide energy audit showed a 38 percent reduction in total energy used on campus since 2002
- In 2009-10 Lawrence reduced the amount of total energy used on campus by approximately 10 percent

- A Winter Term energy reduction competition between five small houses on campus resulted in a 19 percent reduction in natural gas use
- Lawrence University finished ninth among 346 colleges in the 2010 national RecycleMania competition
- The college reduced the number of 8½" x 11" sheets of paper used annually by 500,000 sheets
- The Department of Environmental Studies uses 100 percent post-consumer recycled paper
- Lawrence Today magazine is printed on Forest Stewardship Certified (FSC) paper manufactured within 100 miles of its printer
- Paper products used in the Campus Center bathrooms are made from 100 percent post-consumer recycled paper; all bathroom tissue used on campus is 100 percent post-consumer recycled content; brown hand towels are 100 percent recycled; white rolled towels are 40 percent recycled
- A pilot community reading program was implemented: 16 faculty and staff and 96 students read and discussed "Farm City: The Education of the Urban Farmer" by Novella Carpenter. Carpenter spent four days in the Fox Cities, including meeting with students and working in the SLUG
- There were 15 campus talks and presentations dedicated to sustainability during the 2009-10 academic year
- The President's Cabinet has endorsed a sustainable building policy

This collective, more-focused effort was recognized in May 2010 when Lawrence made its debut in the Princeton Review's Guide to 286 Green Colleges. The guide spotlights colleges that have demonstrated an above-average commitment to sustainability in terms of campus infrastructure, activities and initiatives.

The Sustainable Lawrence University Garden (SLUG) sprang to life in 2005 after President Jill Beck expressed interest in the project and offered financial assistance if students would present a detailed plan. Twenty environmental studies majors and minors were given individual projects researching various facets of garden implementation, and guest experts visited to provide ideas for the project's development. Students recommended the bottom of Union Hill as a viable site, a grant was approved, ground was prepared, and structures were built. Donors Bert '58 and Sue '57 Elliott provided "seed money" for the project.

Today, SLUG provides fresh produce to the Warch Campus Center dining hall, and in 2010 the garden was featured on Wisconsin Public Television's "Wisconsin Gardener" (to watch this feature, visit <http://video.wpt2.org/video/1499619511>).

Most Improved

Lawrence's efforts on the sustainability front were not lost on the editors of Sierra magazine. In its September/October 2010 issue about America's greenest campuses, Sierra cited Lawrence as one of six "most improved" schools for generating a higher green GPA.

Lawrence drew praise for cutting food waste by going trayless in the Warch Campus Center and reducing power consumption by five percent through a change in the academic calendar that had Term I ending by Thanksgiving.

LU-R1: Partnership Opportunities for Students

Lawrence's newest academic initiative — LU-R1: Partnership Opportunities for Students — made its debut this summer, providing real-world research opportunities under the guidance of distinguished alumni mentors.

Professor Nick Maravolo has been appointed Faculty Associate to the President for 2010-12 to develop and lead the LU-R1 program and, in consultation with other members of the science faculty, will select students to spend 10-12 weeks working with Lawrence alumni faculty at R1 research universities across the country.

Eleven science majors launched the program this past summer, working on research topics ranging from invasive aquatic species to immunotherapy drugs to fight leukemia. Next summer the program will expand to place 24 students. Lawrence's LU-R1 initiative complements the rich on-campus programs of summer research done by student-faculty collaborative teams. Details on this exciting program will be featured in the next issue of Lawrence Today.

The Class of 2014

This fall, Lawrence enrolled its largest freshman class ever — 452 students — from around the world.

While they've just begun to make their mark on the Lawrence community, they bring with them an impressive list of academic achievements:

- 6 percent graduated as valedictorians
- 26 percent ranked in the top 5 percent of their high school's graduating class
- 43 percent graduated in the top 10 percent
- The average grade point average was 3.66
- The median ACT score was 29
- The median SAT score was 1890

For more interesting facts about the Class of 2014 visit: http://blogs.lawrence.edu/admissions/tag/class_of_2014

- Geographically, the freshmen represent 34 states and 32 foreign countries.
- Wisconsin is home to the most freshmen, (128), followed by Illinois (83), Minnesota (52) and New York (20)
- With 15 students, China is home to the most freshmen coming from abroad

In addition to their academic achievements, there are countless life stories that stand out among members of the class of 2014. One new freshman student, as a member of the Sound of America Honor Band, was invited to play Taps at the grave of General George S. Patton in July; one is an avid cyclist who rode alongside Lance Armstrong during a Livestrong ride in Milwaukee and another is the United Kennel Club's top-ranked junior obedience handler in the nation.

Meet Memorial Hall!

The opening of the Warch Campus Center saw the grill, coffeehouse, gift shop and information desk moved from Memorial Union to the spacious new building. However, the real estate these services formerly occupied wasn't vacant for long. Thanks to the generosity of William and Phyllis Leverenz Younger '48 and their son, William Jr., Memorial Union underwent a complete interior renovation. Renamed Memorial Hall, the building now houses the following:

- Four classrooms
- Three lounges
- Six faculty offices
- An independently operated textbook store

(But have no fear, the Viking Room remains unchanged and in its original location)

Study Abroad? More Choices

Students wishing to expand their education beyond the classroom and United States borders simply need a passport and a sense of adventure. Lawrence currently offers 47 study-abroad programs in locations ranging from the familiar to the exotic.

Australia	Chile	France	India	Kenya	New Zealand	Tanzania
Austria	China	Germany	Ireland	Madagascar	Russian Federation	United Kingdom
Botswana	Costa Rica	Greece	Italy	Mexico	Senegal
Canada	Ecuador	Hungary	Japan	Netherlands	Spain

Lawrence's London Centre, in its 40th year, is the college's most popular study-abroad program. Nearly 40 percent of students who study off campus choose the London Centre as their destination.

In addition, several faculty members have taken students abroad to conduct research and to enhance learning in other meaningful ways:

- Bart De Stasio '82, professor of biology: The Lawrence University marine program that included a two-week study of a Caribbean island
- Marty Finkler, professor of economics and John R. Kimberly Distinguished Professor in the American Economic System, and Andrew Knudson, associate professor of geology: A study of water resource management in China that included visits to the Pearl and Yangtze Rivers
- Brent Peterson, professor of German: A 10-day walking tour of Berlin that accompanied classroom coursework done in Appleton

- Dena Skran, associate professor of government and Edwin & Ruth West Professor of Economics and Social Science: KidsGive Community Outreach Program for Comforti School in Sierra Leone, West Africa
- French and Francophone studies department: A one-term Francophone seminar in Dakar, Senegal
- Jodi Sedlock, associate professor of biology: Bat research in the Philippine archipelago and cave conservation on Bohol Island, Philippines

19 Students Seize Opportunities

Lawrence students are dreamers. And doers. Following are three examples of students who went to work and changed the campus in 2009-10.

In their first days on campus Will Meadows '13 and Austin Federa '13 decided they wanted their passion for the environment to have a lasting impact. With guidance from associate professor of geology Jeff Clark, the pair spearheaded the acquisition of Lawrence's first solar panel that was installed on the roof of Youngchild Hall on Earth Day 2010. Meadows and Federa helped raise funds for the project, assisted by alumni and friends Debra and Craig Christensen '71, Judith and John Ellerman '58, Mary and Terry Franke '68, Susan '65 and Richard Goldsmith '64, Bruce '57 and Betsy Jarrett Stodola '56, Richard and Barbara Gunderson, Edward and Edith Andrew, and Lewis and Mary Lofgren.

When dining services moved to the Warch Campus Center in September 2009, Johnathan Vanko '13 immediately saw a huge opportunity for unused space in Downer Commons — a student art gallery. He rolled up his sleeves and worked to make his vision come to life. The campus welcomed the Jason Downer Commons Student Art Exhibition in April 2010.

When a convocation speaker unexpectedly cancelled a visit to Lawrence last spring,

Patrick Miner '11 phoned a friend. Miner had previously worked for consumer advocate Ralph Nader and discovered that his friend was available to speak at Lawrence in April. (We're not kidding about the friend part. Check out Miner's Facebook page.) Miner approached the Committee on Public Occasions with his idea for a replacement speaker and, with the help of Greenfire, Lawrence's environmental awareness student organization, Nader spoke to a packed house at Memorial Chapel on April 20, 2010.

20 Going Beyond "Lights, Camera, Action!"

What began in the 1970s as a desire for more in-depth learning about film has become one of Lawrence's most innovative interdisciplinary areas. Film Studies is bringing together students from all across the campus to study the art of filmmaking. "The medium students encounter these days is the moving image," said Alison Guenther-Pal, visiting assistant professor of German and former Lawrence postdoctoral fellow of German and film studies. "When they're taking film studies courses they're learning the language of film, its history and how it creates its meanings, all of which they can use in their personal lives to become more informed and critically literate readers."

Tutorials and directed- and independent-study offerings are also in the mix, allowing students to showcase their ingenuity. A handful of students have even self-designed their own majors or minors in film studies.

Björklunden Expansion

Visiting Björklunden has become a vital component of co-curricular life. Most student organizations as well as many classes spend at least one weekend each year at Lawrence's "northern campus."

The completion of a 20,000 square foot addition during the summer of 2007 more than doubled the size of the building and doubled the number of students the facility can accommodate. Added to the building were two seminar rooms, a computer lab, a mud room, an observation deck and 10 new bedrooms.

Björklunden provides an opportunity for students to remove themselves from traditional on-campus events and activities in order to explore ideas in a unique, informal setting, embracing the liberal education ideals of making connections between thoughts and reflections.

Fatbook performing in the Warch Campus Center

22 Fatbook

For two straight years, Lawrence has laid claim to the best college band in the country, at least in the eyes of DownBeat magazine. After winning the 2009 best blues/pop/rock band prize in the magazine's annual student music awards competition, the seven-member band Fatbook (www.fatbookmusic.com) scored an encore by earning DownBeat's best college band award again in 2010.

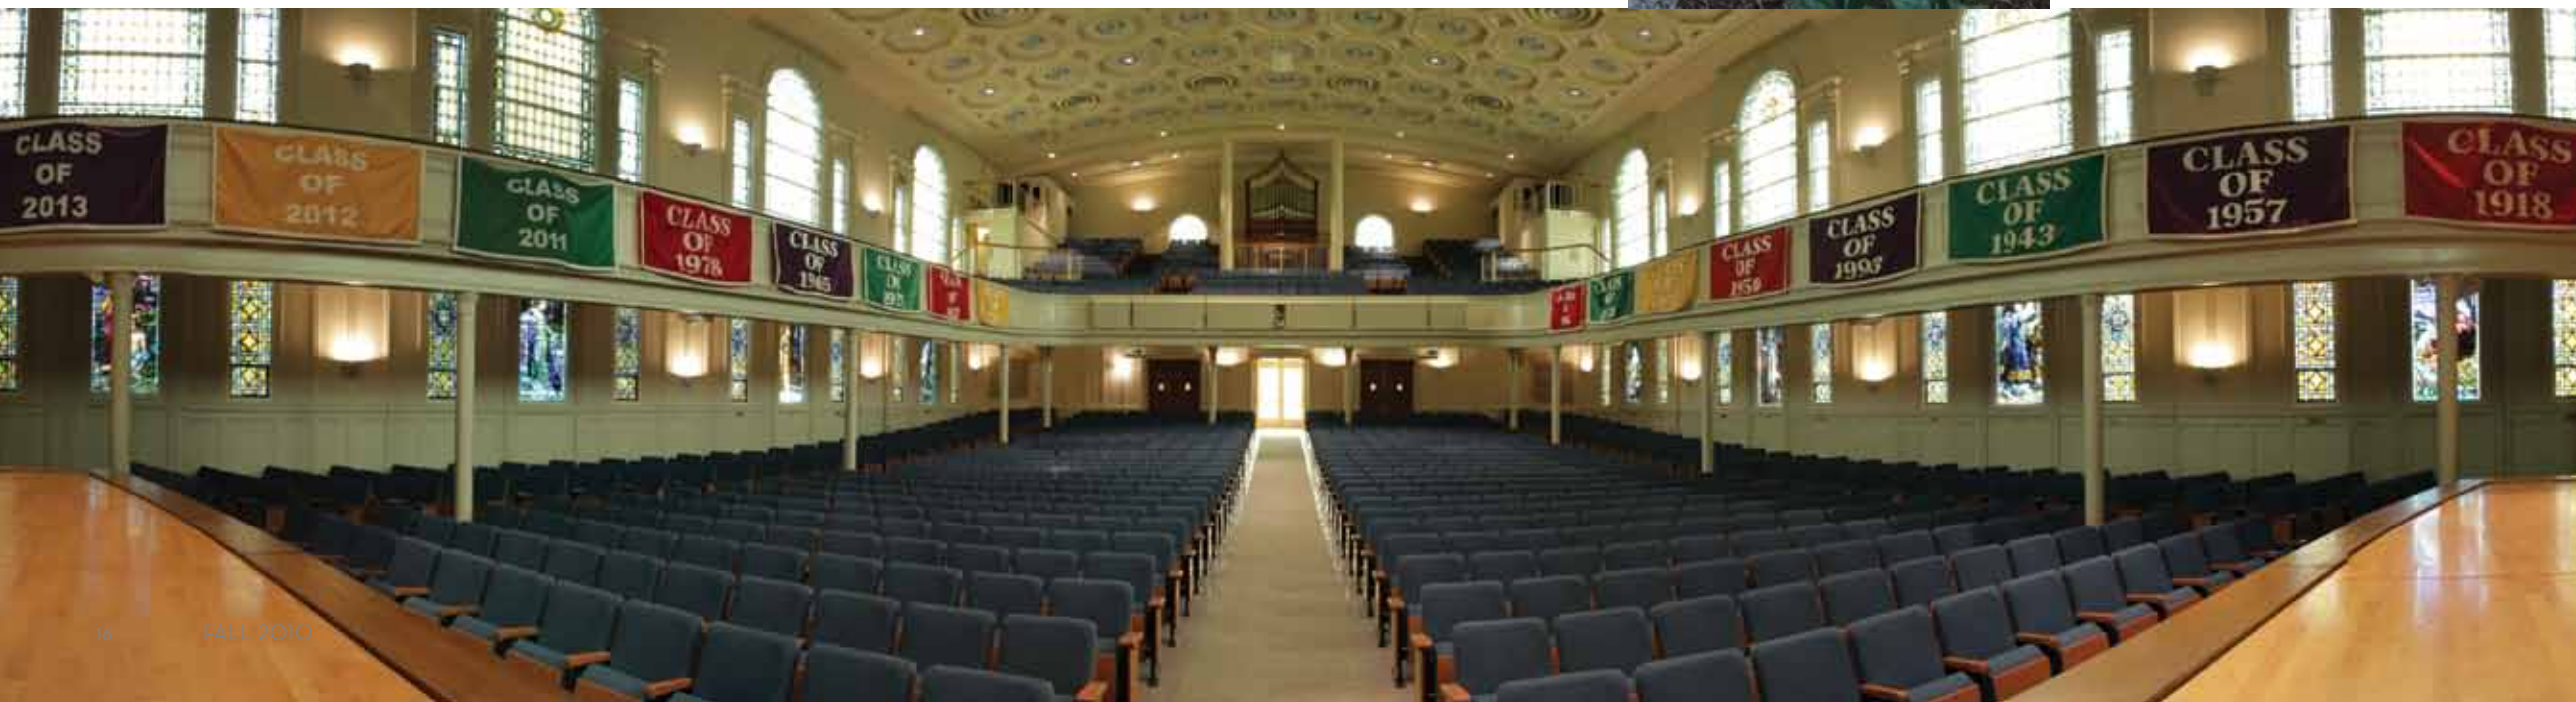

Not only is Fatbook Lawrence's first non-curricular ensemble to be recognized by DownBeat, it is Lawrence's first-ever back-to-back DownBeat award recipient. Known as "DBs" and presented in 15 categories for junior high, high school, performing high school and college divisions, the DownBeat awards are considered among the highest music honors in the field of jazz education.

The Lawrence Wind Ensemble and Jazz Ensemble, vocalists Megan Hamm '07 and Charlie Christenson '05, jazz arranger Doug Detrick '06 and Fred Sturm '73, Kimberly Clark Professor of Music and Director of Jazz Studies, also received DownBeat awards since 2005.

Memorial Chapel Never Looked Better

It wasn't the sort of "Extreme Makeover" you'd see on television, but thanks to an anonymous donor, the Lawrence Memorial Chapel has systematically undergone a complete facelift in the past three years. From a state-of-the-art sound system to a repaired and repainted plaster ceiling, restored front columns and new cement front steps, not to mention new seats (blue instead of purple), new carpeting and floor-level lighting in the aisles, the historic chapel never looked better.

24 Improved Fiscal Management

Lawrence was not immune from feeling the effects of the global economic crisis. However, the Office of Financial Services worked closely with President Jill Beck, the Board of Trustees and the Lawrence Investment Committee on a measured response that kept the college, its programs and its faculty in place.

First and foremost was the creation of a comprehensive program to better manage the college's $50 million in long-term debt. Several significant changes were made including the reduction of variable-rate interest, the development of an affordable repayment structure, shortened repayment terms and the elimination of all balloon payments. During the past two years, Lawrence has seen its long-term debt decrease to $46 million.

A second significant step was to enhance all facets of cash management. The college worked with students and their families to ensure that tuition is paid in a timely manner, collaborated with its banking partners to maximize earnings on idle cash, reduced the use of the college's credit line, initiated a credit card program that provides financial rebates on purchases and began receiving discounts on vendor payments.

"What's changed from five years ago is that the fiscal responsibility is now shared by the administration, the faculty and the Board of Trustees; and that has helped make us stronger," said Trustee and Investment Committee Chair Terry Franke '68. "There were a lot of tough decisions that were made along the way, and I think a lot of very good decisions were made. It was a very volatile situation but we really stood the course without having to make cutbacks to our academic programs or mission. Today Lawrence has a much more solid financial foundation than it did five years ago."

26 Tutorial Excellence

Since March 2007, when Lawrence hosted a conference on "Tutorial Education: History, Pedagogy and Evolution," the university has gained public prominence for the way it has embraced the tutorial approach to teaching students to think for themselves and to have confidence in their conclusions and opinions. Lawrence welcomed representatives from Williams College; St. Peter's College, University of Oxford; New College, University of Oxford; Sewanee, University of the South; St. John's College; The College of Wooster, and Sarah Lawrence College as conference participants — all recognized leaders in tutorial education. With the conference providing the impetus, Lawrence received a $95,000 grant from the Teagle Foundation to develop and research a method for the assessment of tutorial education.

Led by co-investigators Bill Skinner, director of research administration, and Rob Beck, visiting professor of education, Lawrence joined forces with Williams College, College of Wooster and Macalester College in a two-year study to determine how to best assess the outcomes of tutorials. The research group has identified independent thinking, creativity and intellectual maturity as principal learning outcomes, and they have validated these outcomes in tutorial settings involving 40 students. Lawrence professors participating in the study were Rob Neilson, Frederick R. Layton Professor of Art; Dena Skran, Associate Professor of Government and Edwin & Ruth West Professor of Economics and Social Science; Ron Peck, assistant professor of biology; and Jerry Podair, Professor of History and Robert S. French Professor of American Studies.

"Lawrence is one of the leaders in individualized tutorial education in the country, averaging more than 350 tutorials per academic year," said Skinner. "It is important that we understand what students learn in this type of educational experience. Our research indicates that the learning outcomes identified by the professors can be measured with the assessment method we created and showed significant improvement throughout the tutorial education process."

25 Riverwalk and the Gilboy Ring

The quarter-mile-long Riverwalk situated on the banks of the Fox River is a blend of science, history and art initiated by 12 Lawrence students who participated in an environmental studies symposium with Associate Professor of Geology Andrew Knudsen.

Opened to the public in May 2010, the two-level trail features interpretive signs (pictured, left) composed by Lawrence students on three subjects: the historic relationship between Lawrence and the river; the early people who lived in the area; and the geological history of the Fox River.

Highlighting the trail are two African sculptures created from serpentine stone, part of a gift from Milwaukee art gallery owners David and Susan Bamett '81 (see back cover).

Riverwalk's Gilboy Ring, a gift from Steven '62 and Joan Gilboy P'90, features a fire pit surrounded by a stone floor and limestone benches, adding a picturesque meeting place to the Lawrence campus.

Community Engagement

Lawrence continues to develop and strengthen community partnerships locally and globally. Organizations with which Lawrence has an ongoing relationship are listed below:

- Appleton Fire Department: Safety education programs
- Appleton Area School District (AASD): A large number of engaged learning and volunteer projects including:
 - Foreign language instruction program: Coordinating language and culture lessons for third graders
 - Confidence and Determination in Youth (CADY): Providing college-like experiences to elementary and middle school students
 - ArtsBridge: Bringing an integrated dance / social studies curriculum to elementary school children
 - Collaborative nutrition study with UW-Fox Valley: Study of diet and nutritional status of AASD students, social influences on nutrition, nutrition culture and garbage analysis

Environmental Studies and the Walter Schober Professorship

"Man cannot continue to exploit the finite resources of this Earth without effecting his own well-being and that of other species on the planet," said Walter Schober (pictured below with Marcia Bjørnerud). Schober made a gift to Lawrence in 2006, creating an endowed professorship in environmental studies.

Bjørnerud, professor of geology, was named the first holder of the Walter Schober Professorship in Environmental Studies in recognition of her teaching excellence and scholarly achievement. Bjørnerud helped establish the environmental studies program as a major in the late 90s. "In the 21st century, people are much more interested in understanding the impact of harvesting and using the Earth's resources, and the relationship between human activities and environmental systems," she said.

The environmental studies program gives Lawrence students an appreciation for the cultural, political and economic forces involved in, and prepares them to address, this century's pressing and complicated environmental issues.

Since the program's inception, 79 students have graduated with a major in environmental studies. More than a dozen Lawrence faculty members are currently involved in the program.

The New York Times

Lawrence Leads the Way With "Test Optional"

Lawrence's status as a test-optional university has been making headlines for the past four years, most notably in the New York Times. Beginning in 2006, Lawrence became the first Wisconsin college, and one of a growing number nationally, to go test optional, eliminating the requirement of standardized test scores for admission. Instead, applicants are allowed to choose whether they want the Admissions Committee to consider their scores.

Going test optional allows Lawrence to focus on meaningful, individualized measures of the abilities of its applicants.

Steve Syverson, Lawrence vice president for enrollment and dean of admissions and financial aid, told the Times, "We've all grown up with it (standardized tests). It's embedded in the culture. If you really ask around the country, how many admissions officers can tell you at their institution what the predictive validity of the test is? What does it add to our understanding? What do tests help you predict? You'd find a lot of them equate these tests with intelligence. It's not an intelligence test."

LU Posse Student on

Lawrence University's relationship with the Posse program, now in its fourth year, was highlighted on CNN in a feature about Alfredo Duque '13. An immigrant to the United States four years ago from Guerrero, Mexico, Duque barely spoke English when he entered high school.

He and nine other students from New York City — Posse 4 — arrived at Lawrence in September (see #37). Watch the feature here: www.cnn.com/video/#/video/living/2010/04/08/am.obrien.language.cnn

McFerrin and Lawrence Collaborate on "Migrations"

In February 2010, 10-time Grammy® winner Bobby McFerrin joined the Lawrence University Jazz Ensemble, Studio Orchestra and Hybrid Ensemble for the United States premiere of "Migrations: One World, Many Musics." Composed by Fred Sturm '73, Kimberly Clark Professor of Music and director of jazz studies, the work was commissioned by McFerrin as a musical plea for world unity, illustrating the distinct and shared characteristics of indigenous music from 18 countries on six continents.

Conservatory Webcasts

In late 2008, the Lawrence Conservatory of Music began webcasting most of the performances of major ensembles. Today those webcasts are a hit. "Our global webcasts have a huge benefit for prospective students, alumni and parents," said Brian Pertl '86, dean of the conservatory. "Now a high school cellist from Seattle who knows of Lawrence but is wondering about the quality of our orchestra can tune in and be amazed."

Visit www.lawrence.edu/go?qwyc for the 2010-11 webcast schedule.

Diversity of Student Population

"Diversity — racial, cultural, socio-economic, religious, sexual orientation or gender — can only be good for Lawrence," said Steve Syverson, vice president for enrollment and dean of admissions and financial aid.

Syverson joined Lawrence from Los Angeles in 1983, and remembers how unusual it was to hear Spanish-speaking individuals in Appleton in the '80s. "Today, that's not at all unusual and the community is continuing to change."

The benefits of diversity on campus are more apparent than ever. "Of course it's important educationally (see #38) but that's just the beginning." According to Syverson, understanding the differences students will encounter after they leave Lawrence can be as important as what happens in the classroom. "We're preparing students for the world they'll be graduating into."

Admissions has a number of diversity initiatives in place, and is slowly but steadily enrolling increasing numbers of diverse students. Last summer, Lawrence hosted the College Horizons program for a second time, connecting Native American students with college counselors from across the country. Admission Possible, a Minneapolis-based program, focuses on making college possible for promising low-income students and has built a close relationship with the Lawrence admissions office. Establishing relationships with organizations focused on improving the access that minority and low-income students have to college will increase diversity over time, Syverson said.

Of the domestic students in the 2010 freshman class that reported their ethnicity, 17 percent indicated that they were students of color, the largest percentage in decades.

34 Social Media

Lawrence University's interaction with the world via social media and the blogosphere exploded in recent years, forever changing the way the college communicates. "The practice of media relations has been redefined in the last decade," said Sheree Rogers, director of communications. "In 2000, our staff spent countless hours on the telephone with journalists from newspapers, radio and television stations. Today, a blogger we never heard of puts Lawrence on a short list of the best music schools in the country — and all of her research was done online. Our sandbox is much more diverse and in many ways more interesting." (See www.ehow.com/list_6667930_top-music-universities-usa.html.)

Lawrence's website was completely transformed in the past two years with the hiring of New Media and Web Content Coordinator Rachel Crowl, and there is much greater emphasis on interactive media.

Today, Lawrence's primary Facebook page (there are more than a dozen Lawrence-sponsored Facebook accounts) has more than 3,000 followers, all of whom receive almost daily updates from the university. It's an easy and immediate way to share news, much of which won't fit in the pages of Lawrence Today. Join the growing legion of Lawrentians on Facebook at facebook.com/lawrenceuniversity.

With Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, Linked-In, Flickr, Digg and a growing universe of social media, there is an almost infinite number of possibilities for sharing news about Lawrence University with the rest of the world, and also for connecting people who have a shared interest in Lawrence.

President's Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll

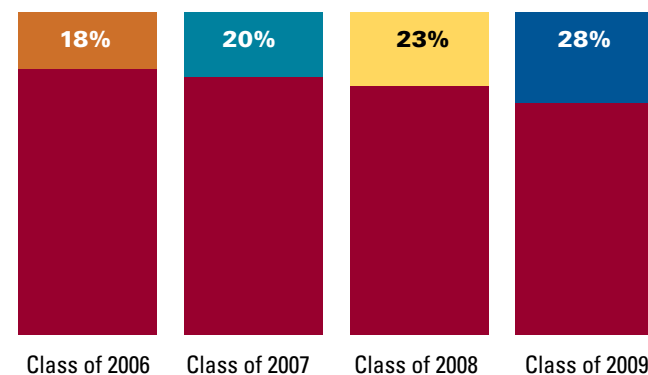

For the fourth consecutive year, Lawrence was named to the President's Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll, the highest federal recognition a college or university can receive for its commitment to volunteering, service-learning and civic engagement.

In the past year, more than 600 Lawrence students contributed more than 12,000 service hours to service-learning and volunteer programs.

36 Preparation for Graduate School

Which universities provide the best preparation for graduate programs? There is mounting evidence that liberal arts institutions such as Lawrence produce the students graduate schools are looking for, especially those programs seeking science students. CBS Moneywatch recently reported that Lawrence ranks 37th on a list of the top 50 colleges producing engineering and science Ph.D.s, outperforming heavyweights Dartmouth, College of William and Mary, and UC-Berkeley in this regard. 37 Posse

One of the most visible programs bringing greater diversity to the Lawrence campus is Posse. In 2006, Lawrence established a partnership with the Posse Foundation, Inc., joining an elite group of 26 colleges and universities across the country associated with the program. Each year, a culturally diverse cohort of 10 student leaders from New York City public high schools is selected to join Lawrence's incoming freshman class.

Mei Xian Gong '11, a native of Guangzhou, China, whose family now lives in New York City, remembers being nervous when she arrived at Lawrence. "I remember the chaos of moving in and being very tired and stressed, but there were people around to help me."

Having spent much of her senior year in high school getting to know the nine other members of her Lawrence Posse, Gong understands the value of a good support system. "I know that no matter how I do here, my Posse will always be a part of me and will help me to fit in."

Gong, who is majoring in chemistry, is now a residence hall assistant in Hiett Hall and has her sights set on graduate school when she leaves Lawrence in 2011. What value does she see in diversity?

She explained it in a way that Lawrentians can appreciate. "Well, there is no meaning to Freshman Studies if everyone in the classroom has the same ideas, is there? Whether we are talking about diversity or Plato, people need to see it in different lights. Maybe you don't see it the same as me, but the way you see it is still important."

38 Justice O'Connor Praises LU Diversity Research

It has long been held that the exchange of ideas and opinions is most beneficial when a diverse group of people is involved. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor endorsed the concept when she wrote the majority opinion in Grutter vs. Bollinger, 2003, stating that diversity leads to educational benefits for all because of a "robust exchange of ideas" (U.S. 539, 17).

In 2009, Robert Beck, Ph.D., a visiting professor of educational psychology at Lawrence, and students set out to prove or disprove the theory. They recorded and analyzed the discussions from four Freshman Studies classes, two that were ethnically and racially diverse and two that were not. The research resulted in a paper, "The Greatest Good for the Greatest Number: An Experimental Study of the Effects of Racial and Ethnic Diversity on Liberal Arts College Discussions."

Among the findings:

- The diverse classes had a significantly larger average number of students who spoke in the development of themes of the discussions.
- Students in the diverse classes expressed more opinions and referred to personal experiences in making their claims.
- Diverse class students were more responsive to other discussants' statements: they followed up with proportionally more high-level questions, re-phrasings and agreements, and a greater number of elaborations/clarifications.
- Approximately 25 percent of the students in the diverse classes also included evidence backing their opinions, whereas less than 10 percent of the students in the non-diverse classes did so.

Beck sent a summary of the research paper to Justice O'Connor and received a thoughtful reply via e-mail, which read: "Thank you for sending me a summary of the research done on the benefit of ethnic and racial diversity in college academic groups. As you might imagine, I was delighted to find support for my assumptions. Sincerely, Sandra Day O'Connor."

Wellness on Campus and in the Community

WellLU

To support the relationship between health, wellness, student development and learning, wellness ideas that were coming from a variety of sources on campus were brought together in 2010 under the WellLU umbrella. Efforts are now focused on increasing opportunities for students, faculty and staff to participate in healthful activities, build connections with each other and also to learn from experts in the field of wellness.

WellLU's Healthy Balance Statement, published at the start of the 2010-11 academic year, asks campus community members to make thoughtful choices. Recognizing that students in particular can be overwhelmed by rigorous academics, the statement reminds students, faculty and staff that balance is key. "Balanced choices flow from an understanding that failure is part of the road to success in all endeavors, whether academic, extracurricular or social," the statement says. "The diligent pursuit of success in the long term will not preclude failures in the short term. Conversely, unrealistic expectations of success in the short term can compromise both health and long-term success if basic human needs are neglected."

Lifeline

Two suicide-prevention grants were awarded to Lawrence in 2009-10. The first, a $300,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) is funding a comprehensive initiative to lower suicide risk in the Lawrence community. Named the Lawrence Lifeline Project, the initiative will enhance training programs for campus personnel and students to recognize, acknowledge and refer distressed students to appropriate resources, and will work to develop comprehensive, creative outreach approaches to help all students feel connected to the campus community. "We want all students to experience Lawrence as a community that is not only intense and fast-paced, but also as a community where it is okay to acknowledge distress and seek help," said Kathleen Fuchs, director of counseling services. The Lawrence Lifeline Project was augmented by a $25,000 grant from the Neenah, Wis., based J.J. Keller Foundation, enabling Lawrence to share best-practice suicide prevention training with Fox Valley area schools and youth nonprofit organizations.

World Music

Besides providing world-class training in Western music, the Lawrence Conservatory of Music has a strong commitment to providing students with a broad exposure to the music traditions of the world. Why?

"We believe that in order to achieve the highest level of musicianship, one needs to bring a breadth and depth of learning that extends well beyond the practice room and rehearsal hall," said Brian Pertl '86, dean of the conservatory and ethnomusicologist. "Just as studying a foreign language gives a student a deeper understanding of their native tongue, studying world music traditions can provide surprising insights into Western musical thought and performance."

Sonja Downing joined Lawrence in 2008 as a Lawrence postdoctoral fellow of ethnomusicology, bringing her interests in Balinese gamelan music, traditional music pedagogy and the intersection of gender and performance to the university.

Ethnomusicologists study music within culture. They ask the question: How does music fit into the larger society? "These approaches can be applied equally well if you are studying musicians from Peru, a rap group from Chicago, a chamber choir from Appleton or even musicians from 13th century France," Pertl said.

The conservatory offers five separate world-music performance opportunities:

- The Sambistas, a Brazilian samba drumming group
- Cuban drumming and singing
- Ghanaian drumming and dance
- Australian didgeridu classes
- Balinese gamelan classes

"I am thrilled that a university of our size offers our students an array of world-music performance opportunities usually found only at much larger schools with the robust graduate programs in ethnomusicology," Pertl said.

Lawrence also hosts a World Music Concert Series. The concert series brings in virtuosos from all over the world to perform and give hands-on lecture demonstrations of their instruments and music traditions. In the past two years Lawrence has welcomed performers from China, Mongolia, Russia, Ghana, India and Tuva, along with leading experts in Cuban music and the music of Central Asia.

Nationally Recognized Departments

Theatre Arts: Lawrence's Theatre Arts program received another standing ovation from the Princeton Review. In its 2011 edition of "The Best 373 Colleges," released earlier this summer, Lawrence was listed as having the 11th best college theatre program in the country. In previous editions Lawrence was ranked 10th, 12th and 17th, depending on how popular college theatre productions were on campus. The Princeton Review rankings are based on surveys in which students are asked to rate their schools on dozens of topics and report on their campus experiences.

Physics: For more than 25 years, the physicists at Lawrence have created a program that goes beyond the curriculum. The physics program has attracted considerable outside attention, and observers suggest that Lawrence supports one of the premier small undergraduate physics programs in the country.

Since 1990, the number of physics graduates at Lawrence has averaged about eleven per year, placing the department in the top 5 percent nationally as a generator of physics graduates. A significant number of these graduates have gone on to pursue doctorates in leading graduate programs in the United States. The Class of 2010 included nine physics majors.

Physics major Faraz Choudhury '11 examines a signal produced by the plasma physics experiment in Professor Matthew Stoneking's research laboratory.

Since 1990, the Department of Physics has received more than $2.8 million in grants to support research, innovative course development, teaching equipment, professional workshops and sabbatical leaves.

Curricular and non-curricular advances including extensive undergraduate research programs, innovative modifications of courses, special signature programs, and a 25-year national recruiting effort are just a few of the extra dimensions that make the physics program at Lawrence distinctive.

Game Plan with a Heart

Lawrence student athletes added a new, powerful dimension to their game in 2009. The Vikings football and softball teams, determined to make a difference off the field, befriended two children with life-threatening illnesses, bringing joy and a sense of belonging to the children who often feel isolated by their medical conditions.

Luke Peters, 9, who had surgery in 2008 to remove a malignant tumor from his brain, travels from Appleton to Milwaukee every six weeks for treatment. Between those trips, Lawrence football is a big part of his life.

Emma Broeniman, 8, also has a brain tumor and has endured more than a dozen surgeries, been through three rounds of chemotherapy and wears a leg brace. In June, she received the Most Inspirational Teammate award at the Lawrence softball banquet, saying, "I've always wanted my own trophy."

During this past academic year, the two teams have interacted countless times with Luke and Emma, in many ways becoming older brothers and sisters, and the children have found a permanent place in the hearts of the Vikings. "My first three years it was all about college sports," said Matt Frelich '10. "My last year was the most enjoyable because it wasn't all about football. Spending time with Luke gave me a broader picture of what life was about."

Members of the Vikings football team celebrate with Luke Peters.

44 Athletics

This past summer, much-anticipated, sweeping changes came to Lawrence University's athletics facilities on the south side of the Fox River. Among the updates:

- A newly resurfaced track that is blue and features the LU logo
- Conference championship banners were hung in the archways of Alexander Gym (pictured above)
- A new sound system was installed in the gymnasium
- Weight equipment was moved to the "green room," providing a more spacious area for student-athletes to train
- The old weight room was converted into a student study lounge, complete with computer workstations
- New outdoor batting cages were installed for the softball and baseball programs
- New indoor batting cages were installed at the Buchanan Kiewit Recreation Center
- A projector system was installed in the team room for video analysis
- Coaches' offices received new office furniture and fresh paint

What do those improvements mean to students and to the college? Athletic Director Mike Szkodzinski says the improvements contribute to better morale and energy levels for student-athletes and the coaching staff, and signal a commitment to athletic programs. "These updates will certainly aid in the recruitment of future student-athletes as well as enable our current student-athletes to truly strive for excellence on and off the field."

The physical changes may be the precursor for improved performance. "There is no doubt that we believe we can reach an elite status in all of our programs," Szkodzinski said. "There has been excellence in Vikings athletics in the past and we will strive to regain that status over the next few years. Through tireless work ethic and an unwavering persistence, Vikings athletics will continue to make positive steps forward."

In September, Lawrence hosted its second annual Report to the Community breakfast, bringing together more than 100 local leaders to celebrate the many significant partnerships between the Lawrence and Fox Valley communities. The highlight of the event was the presentation of the first ever Lawrence University Collaboration in Action Award, which went to the Mielke Family Foundation for its collaboration with Lawrence and the community for more than 20 years (see page 107).

45 Report to the Community

"The Report to the Community is a statement of commitment and responsibility from Lawrence that serves as a visible, tangible reminder that LU is not an isolated island, but a vital part of our community dynamic. And, as a vital part of the community, LU steps up to share accountability for the ongoing work of making this a great place for people to live and learn."

47 Good Eats!

In 2009-10, Lawrence partnered with Bon Appétit, an on-site restaurant company that provides café and catering services to hundreds of colleges and universities across the country.

While Bon Appétit is a large company, its values and ability to collaborate with Lawrence are very personalized.

On the menu each day:

- All-day breakfast bar
- Stockpots — soup, stew and chili
- Garden fresh salads — all dressings are made from scratch
- Vegan/Vegetarian
- Comfort — Mom's home cooking
- Italian pies — pizza, calzones, Stromboli cooked in a fire hearth oven
- The Grill — from short-order breakfast food to dinner entrees
- Antipasto Bar
- Deli
- Global Market — global cuisine including rice and noodle bowls, curries and sambals
- Desserts

Bon Appétit's Circle of Responsibility program provides students, faculty, staff and members of the community (many Appleton residents now dine at the Warch Campus Center regularly) with information about the impact that Bon Appétit's kitchen principles have on the environment, the community and diners' well-being. Educational signage indicates which food choices are local, low-fat, organic, vegetarian, and vegan and which meet certain standards for sustainability.

Bon Appétit also works closely with SLUG (see #14) to use a majority of the produce grown in Lawrence's sustainable garden. In return, food waste from Lawrence's food service operations is returned to the garden for composting.

48 National Grants Enhance Curriculum

The challenge? The United States is losing its competitive advantage in the global marketplace.

Lawrence University's response? Curricular advancements in innovation and entrepreneurship.

Launched in 2009 with the support of a prestigious $150,000 grant from the National Science Foundation, and additional funding from the National Collegiate Inventors & Innovators Alliance, the initiative is anchored in the physics department's In Pursuit of Innovation program. The economics department also is refocusing its core approach to the discipline by introducing new courses such as Entrepreneurship and Finance and The Art of Entrepreneurship, both designed to foster innovative thinking and an entrepreneurial mindset to better prepare Lawrence students to become contributors to a globally competitive American economy.

Creating new things in the world is at the heart of innovation and entrepreneurship according to Adam Galambos, assistant professor of economics. "It's about applying your creativity, knowledge and skills to create something that has value for society. We want our students to do those kind of things."

Adam Galambos

The impetus for the program was the National Academy of Sciences' report, "Rising Above the Gathering Storm," which cited an emphasis on innovative and entrepreneurial effectiveness, especially in scientific, technological and engineering fields, as one solution to restoring America's global competitiveness.

The NSF grant was among 32 national grants Lawrence received from 2005 through 2009 (compared to 13 national grants in the preceding five years). Totalling nearly $4.5 million, the grants were awarded by a spectrum of prestigious agencies and foundations ranging from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation to the National Endowment for the Arts, NASA, the Teagle Foundation and the National Institutes for Health.

2010-11 new faculty

49 Hiring Diverse Faculty

If diversity enables a "robust exchange of ideas" in the classroom (see #38), then having diverse faculty lead the discussion is of paramount importance. While administrators at Lawrence stress that the task of hiring faculty who bring diverse backgrounds and perspectives to the university will be ongoing, inroads have been made in recent years. All faculty search committees now include a diversity point person who is responsible for ensuring that underrepresented groups are included in applicant pools for tenure-track positions. Beyond that, Provost David Burrows will invite an additional candidate to campus for final interviews if that candidate is from an underrepresented group.

The emphasis on diversity of the Lawrence faculty has met with some success. Of the nine tenure-line faculty members appointed in 2009, two are Hispanic, one is East Indian, one is of East Asian origin, one is a foreign national and four are women.

50 The Buchanan Kiewit Wellness Center

Remodeling is underway at the Buchanan Kiewit Recreation Center, transforming it into the Buchanan Kiewit Wellness Center. The goal of the project is to multiply the opportunities for collaboration among wellness services, creating a centralized destination where students, staff and faculty can invest in their own well-being.

As part of the project, health and counseling services are being relocated to Buchanan Kiewit, bringing fitness, recreation, health and counseling services under one roof. The new wellness center will include the following amenities:

- Entry level check-in and information desk
- A new and improved fitness room with cardio and weight machines adjacent to the gym and elevated jogging track
- Creation of offices for programming, wellness and recreational activities
- A centralized suite of offices for health and counseling services

"Integrating recreation, wellness resources, health and counseling services will provide students, faculty and staff with a more convenient location for the services, resources and answers to questions related to the many dimensions of wellness," said Patty Leiker, co-chair of the Lawrence Wellness Steering Committee. "Well-being can be defined as the state of being healthy, happy and prosperous. This project enhances the WellLU initiative, which is working collaboratively to create a healthy campus community and to help students, faculty and staff achieve a state of well-being."

Looking forward

When achieving Lawrence University's mission is the goal, there can be no singular point in time when success is realized.

Those who drafted the 2005-10 strategic plan understood that 2010 was not a destination, but a point in time to begin again the process of assessment, of defining the challenges to be addressed in the next decade and of advancing the university on its trajectory from strong to distinguished. Lawrence faculty and the administration have spent much of the past year drafting the next strategic plan and will present it to the Board of Trustees in late October. While the achievements are significant, there is no doubt on the part of students, faculty and the administration that there is more to be done.

The post-impressionist painter Vincent Van Gogh once said, "Great things are not done by impulse, but by a series of small things brought together." Looking back over the past five years, the individual achievements at Lawrence — far too many to fit on these pages — are exciting and impressive. Together, they are mounting evidence of an academically strong, collaborative and innovative liberal arts university. A university with driving momentum as the Class of 2014, with its own energy and new ideas, begins to make its mark.

FORMATIVE FACULTY

The President's Report annually celebrates the accomplishments of 10 Lawrence University faculty members. With their dedication to the students they teach and to the overall mission of the college, they help define Lawrence as a distinguished institution of higher education. Along with their accomplished colleagues, they are paving the way for students to achieve academic success and acquire the skills that will allow them to become difference-makers in their lives after Lawrence.

ARNOLD SHOBER

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF GOVERNMENT

Current research

The financial effects of school choice. I find this particularly relevant because tight budgets in many districts will prompt school districts to think about efficient spending. School choice does improve the satisfaction of parents and students who use it, and choice does seem to improve the performance of very-low-performing students. But there is little known about the financial benefits and drawbacks of using non-traditional public schooling.

Recent scholarly achievements

SUNY Press published my book, "Splintered Accountability: State Governance and Education Reform," in May. I was also jointly nominated as an "Emerging Education Policy Scholar" by the Thomas B. Fordham Institute and American Enterprise Institute, both in Washington, D.C.

Favorite course to teach

Government 380, Introduction to Public Policy

I like this course because I can teach theory: How do ideas become institutions? When might the benefits of government intervention be ambiguous and why? Why do complex public policies become punchy phrases? It is the only class that I don't demand a traditional paper in. I have students prepare a policy brief, which is something like a glorified sentence outline. It's hard — I tell students that outlines force them to think through their entire arguments, but they don't believe me until they find out that they have to be concise and complete.

About Lawrence students

My students make me be consistent on writing advice and make me explain things in a non-specialist way. They keep me honest ... make me prepared ... and keep me grounded.

Something you might not know about me

While I've always been interested in politics, I wasn't always interested in being an academic. I like to build, I love to be outside, I like to get my hands dirty — in the mud, in the garden. I seriously toyed with becoming an electrical engineer. I'm not an electrical engineer because I misread a college fair list — the college I had planned to stop by and see wasn't actually at the fair — but I felt compelled to talk to someone. In addition, I worked for five summers on the University of Wisconsin sweet-corn breeding and genetics project (7,000 varieties!).

Etc.

One aspect of the job I wasn't anticipating was the media coverage! They didn't train me in graduate school to put together sound bites on politics, nor did they warn me to own a good TV tie.

PROFESSOR OF BIOLOGY

Current research

How lake ecosystems change following human-mediated activity. Many of my projects deal with responses to invasion by nuisance species like zebra mussels, spiny water fleas or fish like the round goby, while others have been examining responses to climate change. I have been conducting long-term research on food- web interactions in Green Bay (Lake Michigan), Lake Winnebago and the lower Fox River as case studies of responses to aquatic invaders. We have found that these ecosystems have shown a different response to invasion than many other areas of the Great Lakes, allowing us to probe more deeply into the mechanisms behind those changes. As part of these projects we are also conducting monitoring for invasive species as part of the reopening of the Fox River Locks. We will be providing the early warning system in case species get past the current invasive species barrier at the Rapide Croche Lock at Wrightstown.

To investigate changes driven by climate change I have been collaborating with colleagues at Cornell University using models of lake physics, chemistry and biology driven by potential changes in climate conditions. In the modeling, we have been using extensive data collected on Oneida Lake, N.Y., as well as data from Lake Winnebago.

Recent scholarly achievements

One of our papers on the Green Bay work was published this past year in the main journal for the International Limnology Society (three of my students are co-authors on that paper: Michael Schrimpf '06, Ashley Beranek '07 and Will Daniels '07), and a paper based on the senior honors thesis of another of my students (Jessica Beyer '09) was accepted for publication.

Connecting with students

As an undergraduate at Lawrence I was most captivated by those teachers that really demonstrated their enthusiasm for their discipline during their classes. I try to inject enthusiasm and my love of biology and ecology into every class that I teach. This is the best job I could imagine and I want every student to come along on this ride with me.

Favorite part of the Lawrence campus

The Science Hall Atrium – it is a beautiful space, it is a crossroads for students and faculty during the academic year and it shows that form and function can be beautiful. I love the intersection of art and science shown in the space.

Something you might not know about me

I have a second degree black belt in Americanized Karate and Eskrima (Filipino stick fighting). My two sons also have black belts (one is a fourth degree and the other is a first degree) — they initially pulled me into the sport but I enjoy it immensely.

ASHA SRINIVASAN

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF MUSIC

Current research

As a composer, I am continuously in the process of broadening my portfolio. Much of my work has been focused on chamber music and electroacoustic compositions, though I am interested in working with large ensembles as well. I am also continuously honing my own language and technique, specifically striving to create effective and interesting combinations of Indian and Western musical styles.

Recent scholarly achievements

I'm especially proud to have had my music selected for performance at the International Computer Music Conference, which took place in Montreal, Canada. I am currently composing a substantial work for wind ensemble. This piece has been commissioned by several universities and colleges, including Lawrence, and will be performed in the upcoming academic year.

The most important lesson I've ever learned in the classroom

The most important lesson for me has always been one of empathy: In a classroom and in a college in general, one can readily see that there are many, many different kinds of people, with different ways of thinking and being, so it makes no sense to be dogmatic or close-minded about anything in life.

About Lawrence students

Lawrence students are highly motivated and talented. My composition students have rich imaginations and a thirst for knowledge that is infectious. The discipline, skill and drive of student performers at the Conservatory is inspiring and refreshing.

Connecting with students

For me, the classroom is a place for dialogue more than lecture (as much as is possible). Through demonstration of my own active engagement and enthusiasm for the material at hand, I try to inspire the students to produce their best work and make their best attempt at learning the topic.

Favorite part of the Lawrence campus

The garden. It just looks beautiful and bountiful when it is flourishing. It also represents the positive attitude to food, sustainability and environment, which is now starting to receive national attention. It's nice to see Lawrence take part in this movement.

Five words that best describe me

Compassionate, easy-going, homebody, simple, workaholic

Something you might not know about me

I love solving Kakuro puzzles (another Japanese puzzle somewhat akin to Sudoku).

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF ENGLISH

Current research

Experimental literary forms from the Harlem Renaissance that explore concepts of race. I am especially interested in hybrid literary forms by James Weldon Johnson, Jean Toomer, Zora Neale Hurston and Richard Bruce Nugent that question racial boundaries or simultaneously consider race as a social construct and race as a lived experience.

Recent scholarly achievements

I was invited to submit my work on Ford Madox Ford for inclusion in the newly revised Norton Critical Edition of Ford's "The Good Soldier." My piece entitled "Masculinity and Empire in "The Good Soldier"" will be included in the forthcoming edition from Norton.

My career path

At one point in my childhood my career ambition was to be a postal carrier, and at another point, I wanted to become a professional oboist. But during most of my childhood I wanted to grow up to be a writer and teacher. When I was in first grade, I wanted to be a first-grade teacher. The age of my imagined students kept increasing with each year that I advanced in school. I had such a valuable experience as a student at Lawrence that I decided to pursue a Ph.D. with the hopes of becoming a professor at a small, liberal arts college. I never imagined that I'd become a professor at Lawrence!

Connecting with students

I strive to share with my students the pleasures of intellectual inquiry as we delve into questions that they and I find genuinely interesting. I try to listen well; then I can guide my students in pushing their thinking further as we build upon each other's ideas.

Favorite part of the Lawrence campus

Main Hall Green is my favorite part of campus because I have such good memories of playing soccer there with fellow members of Lawrence International when I was a student. I remember seeing faculty like Peter Fritzell leaving their offices at the end of the day and walking past our soccer matches. Now I mostly enjoy the Main Hall Green when I'm looking out my office window and when I'm walking to and from my office while students are playing ultimate Frisbee.

Something you might not know about me

I've been a Butler University basketball fan since the age of two (when I lived across from Hinkle Fieldhouse) — long before most people had heard of the Butler Bulldogs.

Etc.

I was honored this year to receive the Freshman Studies Teaching Award. I really enjoy teaching Freshman Studies, especially since I feel like I return to being a liberal arts student as I stretch outside of the humanities to teach works such as Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring" and Bjørnerud's "Reading the Rocks."

PETER PEREGRINE

PROFESSOR OF ANTHROPOLOGY

Current research

I have two different research interests. First, I am interested in how ancient people first came to live together in large communities with powerful political leaders. Second, I am interested in how people from different cultures and speaking different languages interact and sometimes merge. These two areas of interest are obviously related, and I've spent most of my career working on one or the other of them.

Recent scholarly achievements

I was co-editor of a book, "Ancient Human Migrations," that pulled together work that I and a large group of scholars have been doing on migrations. The work was coordinated through the Santa Fe Institute and involved 30 people. We were able to get a set of really fine papers from that group and produce a good volume on the project. What we learned is that migration often leads to a linguistic and cultural shift for either the migrants or the locals, but that migrants and locals interbreed, so that while linguistically and culturally it may look like a migrant group either pushed out or was assimilated by an indigenous group, in reality admixture between the two groups usually takes place.

Favorite part of the Lawrence campus

My office. I overlook the river and can watch eagles hunt fish in summer and ducks in winter. I have good friends all around me, students stopping in now and then, my computer and books. What could be better?

Outside the classroom

I read a lot—history and classic literature mainly. I love movies, and I probably watch five films a week. I walk four or five miles a day (the dogs morning and evening, and to and from work) and I very much enjoy that. I also build and play a variety of string instruments including guitar, bouzouki and mountain dulcimer. This winter I'm going to build a hurdy-gurdy, which is a medieval mechanical violin. And I repair small engines (like lawnmowers) for friends and myself. That's a lot of stuff—no wonder I'm always busy!

Five words that describe me

Bemused, intelligent, responsible, inquisitive, compassionate

Something you might not know about me

I'm a qualified crewmember on a U.S. Coast Guard 25' response boat and volunteer for search-and-rescue missions on Lake Winnebago. I am also a hospice volunteer and help to feed residents at Cherry Meadows hospice a couple of times a week.

ROSA TAPIA

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF SPANISH

Current research

Immigration in Spanish film. In other Western countries, the immigrant subject has occupied the social and artistic imaginariium for many decades, so there is abundant research on the matter. In contrast, Spain has received a massive migratory flow only in the last decade. For this reason, artistic expressions about this reality are a relatively recent occurrence. As a literary and cultural scholar, I find interesting connections in this area (and also stark contrasts) between Spain and other Western societies, such as the United States and other European countries.

Recent scholarly achievement

I presented at a national conference on the topic of immigration and gender representation on film. I specifically talked about the depiction of immigrant women in Spanish films throughout the last decade. I received very positive feedback from a number of colleagues with similar research interests, and it was exciting to plan future collaborations with some of them.

About Lawrence students

It is very rewarding to be able to set high expectations, knowing that most students will respond to them. Many advanced students in the Spanish program rapidly progress to the point of being able to have sophisticated academic discussions, and produce high-quality scholarly work in their second language. Their talent and hard work push me to keep improving my teaching. I update my courses often in order to keep them relevant, engaging and challenging.

The most important lesson I've ever learned in the classroom

As a professor, the greatest life lessons in the classroom came from students who were going through the most difficult circumstances you can imagine. Their determination and love of learning was an inspiration. Although our students are mature and bright young adults, I have learned that it is also my job to remind them that they are not supposed to do this on their own. We are a remarkable community and, in my experience, the best type of learning is the one that happens in a collaborative and supportive environment.

Favorite part of my day

Being in the middle of a really good class discussion

Five words that best describe me

Caring, non-judgmental, independent, trustworthy and resourceful.

Something you might not know about me

I failed my karate black-belt exam at the tender age of 15. I suddenly became ill in front of a panel of stern-looking Japanese judges who came to Madrid for the occasion. I never quite recovered from that.

SCOTT CORRY

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF MATHEMATICS

Current research

I am currently pursuing some exciting analogies between Riemann surfaces and finite graphs. The world of Riemann surfaces is a beautiful area of 19th century mathematics, which continues to be studied today for its intrinsic interest and powerful connections to such diverse areas as analysis, algebra, number theory and mathematical physics. Over the past 30 years, surprising analogies have been discovered between these rich geometric spaces and certain combinatorial objects called finite graphs: finite collections of points, some of which are connected by edges. My recent work has focused on the study of symmetries of finite graphs with an eye toward the analogy with Riemann surfaces.

Recent scholarly achievements

I spent July and August of 2009 as a visiting fellow at the Isaac Newton Institute for Mathematical Sciences in Cambridge, UK. I was in residence for the program "Non-Abelian Fundamental Groups in Arithmetic Geometry." In addition to giving a talk on some previous research, I was able to interact with prominent mathematicians from around the world. Above all, the tranquil gardens of Cambridge's many colleges served as an ideal setting for furthering my research.

Favorite course to teach

Freshman Studies. The opportunity to regularly teach outside of my field attracted me to Lawrence. It is truly remarkable that in addition to teaching mathematics at various levels and doing research, part of my job is to sit in a room with 15 bright young people and talk about Plato's "Republic" and Messiaen's "Quartet for the End of Time." I would characterize myself as almost embarrassingly enthusiastic about the liberal arts, and I love working with students on their ability to read, write and discuss intellectual matters — I want them to see the joy in it.

The most important lesson I've ever learned in the classroom

Good questions are much more valuable (and harder to formulate) than good answers.

Five words that best describe me

Goofier than you might think.

Something you might not know about me

I played classical guitar seriously until I went to college, and then unfortunately let it fall out of my life. I recently picked it up again, and I enjoyed playing some this summer. I'd like to take it more seriously again if I can find the time.

SAMANTHA GEORGE

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF MUSIC
AND TEACHER OF VIOLIN

Current research

In preparing to teach an Orchestral Literature class for violinists this fall, I had a great time gathering information from major professional orchestras regarding their audition lists and processes. Orchestras around the world handle auditions very differently, and students need to be prepared for any audition situation.

Recent scholarly achievements

This past year I was just really proud of my students. Two violinists from my studio won the Lawrence Symphony Orchestra's Concerto Competition, and all of the violin majors who graduated from my studio were offered full-tuition scholarships for their graduate studies. There was just really great violin playing going on.

Upcoming projects

I am working on a CD of Baroque music with my friend and collaborator, Stas Venglevski, who plays the bayan. We have some terrific arrangements of Vivaldi's "The Four Seasons," and the combination of violin and accordion is compelling. Don't make any judgments until you have heard it!

Favorite course to teach

I really love teaching chamber music and violin lessons, but I think my favorite course to teach is my technique class for freshmen and sophomores. Often students think of technical studies as mindless and tedious, and I love to find fresh ways to work on technique that keeps it alive and challenging. It's also wonderful to see the technical progress develop so quickly; freshman technique class is the perfect place to eradicate bad habits and set up systems and techniques that will work for a lifetime.

My career path

I pursued my doctoral studies so that this career path would be open for me. I didn't know when it would happen, but after about twenty years of playing in professional orchestras, I was ready and excited for the switch to full-time teaching.

Favorite part of my day

Visiting the Conservatory basement late at night.

Outside the classroom

I love great food and am willing to go to great lengths to find it. My favorite restaurant is Blackbird in Chicago. I enjoy visiting museums, art galleries, oriental rug stores and foreign cities.

Something you might not know about me

One of my greatest musical thrills was playing the "National Anthem" for a Milwaukee Brewers game. I had dinner with Bob Costas and Bob Uecker in the team dining room. I actually recorded the radio broadcast at home because I wanted to hear Bob Uecker announce me! I think that was the largest audience I have ever played for.

Bass performance in jazz and classical genres. I also enjoy composing music and researching jazz history.

Recent scholarly achievements

Release of the unaccompanied jazz CD "Foreground"; "Unaccompanied Jazz Bass Performance: History and Practice," lecture/recital at the International Society of Bassists Convention in State College, Pa.; jazz performances with Lyle Mays, Ted Piltzecker, Tom Gullion (where we premiered my composition "Pink Dog"), and the Lawrence Faculty Jazz Group (where we premiered my composition "Cat's Cradle"); performances with the Lawrence Chamber Players, including a performance on the WPR "Live from the Chazen" radio show; faculty solo recital; I also had nine CD reviews published in the Journal of the International Society of Bassists.

Favorite course to teach

I have two favorites: bass lessons and Intro to Jazz History. Bass lessons are an obvious winner for me; it's what I do the most and I love it. There's nothing better than seeing a student discover a new way of thinking about a technical or musical issue; the light bulb goes off and they succeed in a new way. I love teaching the Intro to Jazz History course because it is an opportunity for me to share my joy in listening to music with a broader audience.

Connecting with students

I would say that my style is flexible and positive. I focus on the individual goals and interests of each student rather than herding them all through the same sequence of pieces, or forcing everyone to play the same way. I emphasize the improvements that students make so they can become excited about practicing and progressing.

Favorite part of my day

My practice time: just me and my bass solving problems and making music.

Five words that best describe me

Empathetic, laid-back, humorous, intense, tall

Something you might not know about me

I competed in my first triathlon this past summer.

One of my dear students from several years ago made me a doll as a present when she completed her studies with me. She is pretty resourceful and quite funny; anyway, she actually made the doll talk! She took a miniature recording device from a programmable greeting card and stuck it to the back of the doll; she recorded what, apparently, had become a kind of mantra in our lessons. When you pushed a button on the doll's back it said, "Practice slowly! Use a metronome! Always use consistent fingerings and bowings!"

KATHLEEN ISAACSON

LIBRARY SYSTEMS COORDINATOR, REFERENCE
LIBRARIAN AND ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR

Current research

Though I've been at Lawrence for many years, my research interests have varied from year to year because of the constant change around me and the variety of ways I work to support the academic program. In an abstract sense, my work is resolving puzzles: matching intellectual inquiries with the printed, visual and electronic resources that might help students succeed. I'm also the coordinator for the Associated Colleges of the Midwest / Great Lakes Colleges Association federated membership in the Interuniversity Consortium for Political and Social Research, a social science data archive.

Upcoming projects

We are about to lay the foundation for a new service that will in some areas make it possible to pull together resources from different electronic services, digital collections and the library collection to simplify information-gathering for our students and faculty. If you have heard of "cloud computing," you may have a sense of what we could be providing for our campus: most of our electronic resources would be simultaneously available from the "cloud," which would speed up research and reduce frustration significantly. In order to get there we need a significant addition to our technology software budget, but the improvement in service will almost compare to moving from cards in drawers to an online catalog, on a grand scale.

About Lawrence students

The creativity of our students makes life at the reference desk immensely interesting. So many questions students have are intriguing, and in the process of assisting students in their research I continually build my own knowledge bank for the next question.

My career path

I always did like libraries — even the rickety neighborhood public library when I was in elementary school. As an undergrad, I spent hours wandering around in the large research library, imagining becoming a scholar of whatever field I happened to be browsing in. But I was more of a generalist, so I found the ideal situation when I got my library degree and started working at Lawrence — a liberal arts college library where one could work closely with students and faculty and still enjoy the arcane details of doing the behind-the-scenes work that has its own academic discipline.

Something you might not know about me

In college, there was a required course for my major that involved a significant amount of computer use, and I didn't want to take it, so I changed my major and avoided that course. Is it karma that I sit at a keyboard much of the day now?

DEAR LAWRENTIANS,

For the second straight year, private colleges are continuing to struggle with the profound financial impact of the global economic crisis. The national unemployment rate spiked and remained at well over 9.5 percent, and though personal investment portfolios that had experienced traumatic decline made strong recoveries, they remained far below previous highs. Our students and their families were challenged to secure the financial resources to pay tuition. The endowment fund made solid gains this past year and continued to outperform its benchmarks, but it remained far below its market value high point before the economic downturn. The impact on donors was significant as annual gift giving was substantially under plan for the year.

Anticipating the challenges of the global economic crisis, the university responded with an aggressive financial plan to protect our critical revenue sources. Under President Beck's leadership, we remained committed to the guiding principle that all financial actions taken ensured that the academic and artistic core was maintained if not enhanced. In other words, our top priority was the educational experiences of our students and the individualized attention they received from faculty in classrooms, laboratories, studios.

We developed financial aid packages to respond to new- and returning-student and student-family financial hardships caused by the economic crisis. We also reduced the endowment distribution from the prior year by $2 million to protect endowment assets and ensure its financial health for the long run. University staff worked closely with donors to seek their support in helping Lawrence, but the impact of the economic crisis made this an uphill challenge — as indicated in the report by Cal Husmann, Vice President for Alumni, Development and Communications — annual giving support was also below target.

The economic crisis had a direct impact on all university employees as salaries were frozen at last year's level. Lower-compensated employees received their full retirement contributions but all other employees experienced a contribution cap. All employees worked hard to manage other expenses to a zero growth level. Continued unprecedented variable-debt interest rates and utility rates proved very beneficial to Lawrence. But our health insurance plan's financial performance was substantially over plan.

Lawrence ended the year in a financially balanced position, which is a remarkable achievement given the enormous financial difficulties it faced. Heartfelt thanks go out to our employees for their personal financial sacrifices and vigilant effort to help find ways to save money. Also, we remain humbled by the financial commitment of our students, their families and our donors, who have shown tremendous support during these difficult times. As you will read in this magazine, the college has made tremendous strides in its financial position, in academic innovations, enhancements to the physical plant and support for students and faculty. Lawrence's momentum is directly related to the involvement of the entire community of alumni, parents, students, faculty and friends.

Brian J. Riste
Vice President for Business and Operations

Although the figures presented here are in compliance with standards adopted by CASE (Council for the Advancement and Support of Education) and NACUBO (National Association of College and University Business Officers), they differ from the presentation of gift income on the college's financial statements. This report includes both gifts and payments on pledges received during 2009-10 but excludes new pledges received during the fiscal year. Financial Statement gift income, on the other hand, augments these numbers by the value of new pledges received during the year and reduces them by the value of payments made on pledges received in the prior fiscal year.

DEAR FRIENDS,

Gift income from private sources totaled $11.2 million, a 33 percent decrease from last fiscal year's $16.8 million. These results reflect, in part, the impact of a stressed economy on philanthropic giving for major gifts and at the higher levels of annual giving. On a positive note, the college experienced increases in Heritage level ($250+), Viking ($500+) and parent giving in response to the Trustee initiative, "Game, Set, Match!" Another aspect of giving — bequest income — was also down significantly, while the number of individuals who included Lawrence in their estate plans increased. These results reflect the college's long-standing strengths in the foundations of our fund-raising programs, specifically annual giving (The Lawrence Fund) and deferred giving (The Lawrence-Downer Legacy Circle).

Use of Funds Received

Of the $11.2 million received, $3 million was received in gifts directed to the physical plant, $3 million for the endowment, and $197,000 for life-income gifts. The college received $1.47 million for restricted current gifts. Gifts to The Lawrence Fund tallied $3.35 million and $17,025 was received in other budget-relieving gifts. Approximately $140,000 is undesignated, pending discussions with donors regarding permanent allocations.

Realized bequest income totaled $796,421, an 83.9 percent decrease from last year's $4.95 million. Membership in the Lawrence-Downer Legacy Circle grew to 815 living members from 777 in fiscal 2008-09. Corporate and foundation support for fiscal 2009-10 was $1.4 million versus $2.4 million received in fiscal 2008-09.

The Lawrence Fund

Lawrence University received $3,354,684 in gifts to The Lawrence Fund for fiscal 2010, which reflects an 8 percent decrease from last fiscal year's $3,647,259 in gifts secured. The biggest loss of The Lawrence Fund support was in the corporate and foundation ranks ($150,000). The remainder came from decreases in Lutetium, Lawrencium and Platinum levels of support. The trustee challenge (Game, Set, Match!) was successful at encouraging increased giving in other levels and new donations. Of the 1,465 alumni who participated in the match, 64 percent were new donors. A total of 755 parents participated, as well as 769 friends of the college, and 86 percent of both of these groups were welcomed to our donor ranks for the first time. In total, 2,989 alumni, parents and friends took advantage of this opportunity, and the trustees matched $770,561 for The Lawrence Fund. Overall, gifts from parents were up 10 percent, and we also had a significant increase in the number of donors at the $250 and $500 levels.

Founders Club membership was 716 versus 743 last fiscal year (the record is 773 members set in fiscal 2007-08). Founders Club members contributed $2.2 million or 66 percent of The Lawrence Fund gifts versus $2.4 million or 66 percent of The Lawrence Fund gifts in fiscal 2008-09. In fiscal 2009-10, Milestone Reunion classes contributed $281,872 or 8.4 percent of all gifts to The Lawrence Fund. When including gifts, multi-year pledges, restricted gifts and planned gifts (for the 50th Reunion), the Classes of 2000, 1985, 1970, 1960 and 1950 collectively committed $3,868,822.

The alumni donor participation rate dropped slightly again this year to 41.3 percent from 43.2 percent, and the number of alumni donors declined to 5,844 from 6,186 last year. We are attempting to reverse this trend for fiscal 2011 and have already launched an "early bird" mailing. As of Oct. 4, we have received 385 replies and raised $119,596. This puts us 2.7 percent ahead of our participation rate and 24.5 percent ahead of The Lawrence Fund dollars received compared to this time last year.

Support for Björklunden via The Boynton Society also declined — $219,479 compared to last year's $251,135 — for operating gifts for Björklunden.

Endowment and Physical Plant

Gifts to the endowment totaled $3.03 million, a decrease from last year's $7.17 million, and the college's average ($6 million) for the past decade. Within the $3 million plant gifts, $2.3 million was received for the Campus Center, $144,000 for the Björklunden expansion project, $432,000 for Memorial Chapel renovation and $100,000 for the Buchanan Kiewit Wellness Center renovation.

More Light! Campaign

As of September 24, 2010, total gifts and commitments for the campaign stand at $134 million. Given the challenges of the economy, major gifts have become more difficult to secure. While securing major gifts remains our top priority, we have focused our efforts intensely on the Lawrence-Downer Legacy Circle and annual support via The Lawrence Fund. The development staff and campaign volunteers have increased their efforts in the field, understanding the long-term benefits of those efforts. The final gap of any campaign is always the most challenging, regardless of the economy. We have the benefit of having a constituency of fiercely loyal alumni, parents and friends who are committed to supporting the college, in good times and bad. With this, More Light! continues its strong momentum.

We remain grateful for the generosity and dedication of our supporters. Special thanks to all who have provided philanthropic support to ensure that we are able to advance Lawrence University's mission.

Calvin D. Husmann
Vice President of Alumni, Development and Communications

DEAR LAWRENTIANS,

This was the year the Lawrence admission office went "paperless." Not entirely paperless, but we eliminated paper application folders. The financial aid office had done so about three years ago, with great success. About 80 percent of our applicants submitted their applications electronically through the Common Application. A lesser but increasing proportion of transcripts, teacher and counselor recommendation forms, ACT and SAT scores, and other application documents are being submitted electronically, so it seemed an opportune time to convert to solely electronic records. Any documents that arrived by regular mail were scanned and indexed into application files. And, in spite of some of the apprehensions we had, the transition to paperless application "folders" was relatively painless.

One of the big changes is that admission officers now read all their applications at a computer screen, but it also means that rather than lugging home a literature case full of folders to read, they can carry just a laptop. The change also allows Carin Smith, our Chicago regional representative, easy access to any application folder.

While catalyzed by the potential for increased efficiency, not environmental concerns, our conversion to solely electronic application folders meshes well with the campus Green Roots initiatives as it will annually save about 300,000 pieces of paper. A side benefit is that Wilson House now has more space, as we were able to remove eight large filing cabinets! The next phase of the impact will be for the faculty advisors (who previously were given photocopies of their advisees' application folders) and the registrar (who in the past retained the original application folder as each student's core physical record).

Further contributing to our migration to a digital existence, the majority of our inquiries now come to us electronically — through e-mail requests for information, through our own website, or through a variety of third-party Internet college-search engines. Two of a new genre of these websites, cappex.com and zinch.com are providing the largest share of these new inquiries, and we are still adjusting to the best strategies to utilize these new media.

In the past, when a student wanted to learn about (or apply to) Lawrence, he or she contacted us to request a viewbook and application. Increasingly, though, students have no need to contact us directly unless they want to arrange a campus visit: they rely on the Internet to find the information they need to aid them in their college searches. So, it is critical that we make our website as dynamic and vibrant as possible, an effort we have pursued through the use of YouTube (such as the This Is Lawrence videos), the webcasting of conservatory concerts, and a revised and vitalized website format.

Last year (2009) we entered the spring admission season under a cloud of economic uncertainty. Correctly anticipating that the financial upheavals of the year would result in a decreased yield rate on our offers of admission, we offered admission to a larger number of applicants than in 2008 to be able to fill our class of 352 freshmen.

This year our target for new-student enrollment was 380 freshmen and 30 transfers. We assumed the fabulous new Warch Campus Center would have a positive impact on our yield rate. And in addition to the substantial enhancements of our website and expanded alumni coverage of college fair programs, we pursued a number of other strategies aimed specifically at improving our yield rate. So we offered admission to exactly the same number of freshman applicants as last year, assuming that the above-mentioned initiatives would increase the yield rate, enabling us to enroll 8 percent more students from the same number of offers. But we apparently grossly underestimated the impact, as we have enrolled 455 freshmen — 100 more than last year! As soon as it appeared we were enrolling so many more freshmen, we ceased accepting any more transfer students, so we have enrolled a total of 17 transfer students. But our fall enrollment is about 1,525, an unexpected increase over the 1,432 of last year.

Obviously, the large number of incoming freshmen brings with it extra challenges. We have had to use the Kohler and Colman Hall floor lounges as residence rooms, as well as a number of other spaces on campus that were not originally slated to have students in them. The new classrooms in Memorial Hall (the old Memorial Union) will be fully utilized this year and the lower-level conference room in Brokaw Hall has been furnished as a classroom. A number of extra sections of Freshman Studies have been added to keep class sizes at 15 students, and there are extra sections of several introductory courses being offered to ensure that we can accommodate the interests and needs of our students.

Aside from being larger than anticipated, this class is again worth celebrating. Drawn from a record number of applicants, they boast an academic class profile stronger than recent years, excellent balance and talent in the conservatory, and heightened geographical and ethnic diversity with 15 percent of the freshmen being members of underrepresented ethnic groups and only 27 percent of the class coming from Wisconsin. And if we include the exchange students from Waseda University, over 14 percent of our new students are coming from abroad. So we look forward with great enthusiasm to their enrichment of our campus community.

Vice President for Enrollment and Dean of Admissions and Financial Aid

Throughout the year, Lawrence University was privileged to receive the support of generous donors who made contributions of $50,000 or more for specific purposes. Those contributions support the capital construction, expansion or improvement of the college's facilities, or are endowed funds supporting Lawrence's faculty, student scholarships and programs.

"Insuring" Students are Successful Now and Later

After 40 years running an insurance business, Don Jabas '50 knows a thing or two about preparing for the future. Don and his wife, Betty '48, met at Lawrence. They feel indebted to Lawrence for the education they received from its outstanding faculty and for the many friends they made during their years of attendance. They developed a sense of obligation to Lawrence. This feeling resulted in giving annually, becoming original members of The Founders Club, and deciding to establish the Donald F. and Elisabeth F. Jabas Scholarship Fund in 1999. This past year the Jabases ensured that the fund met the current threshold needed to name scholars by making another generous gift to their fund. By doing so, the Jabas scholarship can award important support to students with financial need now and later. Don and Betty are pleased that their gift is part of the More Light! campaign — a priority of which is strengthening student financial aid. Their latest gift also marked Don's 60th Reunion in 2010, for which he was an active volunteer. Don and Betty stated, "We enjoy meeting and visiting with our scholars. We feel very good about our gifts to Lawrence." At a time when the economy has made it difficult for students and their families to afford a quality education, the Jabases have created a meaningful "insurance policy" for Lawrence students of today and tomorrow.

What is the answer to "got legacy?" The answer — 815. This is the number of alumni, parents and friends who are members of the Lawrence-Downer Legacy Circle. Each member has secured his or her individual legacy that will help support the Lawrence of the future.

Why have they created a legacy? Because a professor profoundly touched their lives. Because they still reference a particular piece of literature or a class from their college years nearly every day. Because they have cherished friendships that were started when sharing a dorm room or study group. Because they haven't missed a symphony concert at Memorial Chapel in years.

The reasons are as varied as our Legacy Circle members' experiences, but all of them stem from a desire to pass along the unique gift they have received from their affiliation with Milwaukee-Downer College, Lawrence University and Björklunden.

In the past fiscal year Lawrence welcomed 62 new members to the Lawrence-Downer Legacy Circle. Those whose legacies were realized in the past year resulted in nearly $1 million in support for students, faculty, research labs, equipment and musical instruments.

The Legacy Circle National Council grew to 36 members who actively promote the Legacy Circle and help thank those who join. We are deeply grateful to our National Council for being active ambassadors of this special program.

Please check out the new legacy giving website (www.lawrence.edu/legacygiving) for inspiring stories, intriguing videos and helpful information about beginning to plan or augmenting your legacy.

Finally, many thanks to our Legacy Circle members for taking this step and sharing their intentions with the college. We are making a difference today and well into the future.

WOMEN WITH A WILL ...

Roberta Neill Krieg

This past year saw the establishment of two endowed funds honoring the memory of two strong-willed women who remembered Lawrence in their estate plans. Roberta Neill Krieg graduated cum laude with the Class of 1943. Barbara Garrison Peterson was a Phi Beta Kappa member of the Class of 1952.

They never knew each other, and yet these two women shared many of the same views and values, and led lives full of inquiry, compassion and vitality. They both worked professionally as social workers. Roberta married a prominent professor of neuroanatomy later in her life, becoming a step-mother to his loving son. Both were independent: they made choices that were not the norm for their time. Most of all, they both greatly valued education — and, more specifically — the kind of education they received at Lawrence.

Thanks to their thoughtful planning, the Roberta Neill Krieg Scholarship and the Barbara Garrison Peterson Endowment will provide ongoing support for the education these women treasured. The students who benefit from their generosity will learn that they are following in the footsteps of women with vision and purpose. Roberta and Barbara lived lives of inspiration, and through their legacy gifts, they will inspire countless generations at Lawrence in the years to come.

We are grateful to Roberta and Barbara for leaving legacies worthy of their colorful and meaningful lives. What will your legacy be?

Barbara Garrison Peterson

Founders Club members provide 66 percent of Lawrence Fund giving

Providing a high quality liberal arts education to students regardless of their ability to pay tuition remains Lawrence's top priority. This would simply not be possible without the annual support of alumni, parents and friends. One special group of supporters, Founders Club members — 716 individuals making Lawrence Fund gifts of $1,000 or more — provided 66 percent or $2,216,266 of the $3,354,684 raised this year. Founders Club-level support, which ranks among the most generous in the constituency, is an investment in the entire academic enterprise at the college and ensures that students today have opportunities to realize their dreams.

My sincere thanks to all of our new and returning Founders Club members.

A Founding Father

Earl W. Berry '50 represents the second generation of a rich family tradition at Lawrence. Following the path of his father and a number of aunts and uncles, Earl attended Lawrence after serving in WWII, and met his late wife Jean Hill Berry '48 here. Years later their son, Mark Berry '77, continued the family legacy and also graduated from Lawrence.

Earl has been a long and fervent supporter of The Lawrence Fund. In fact, Earl has been a member of The Founders Club — those who donate $1,000 or more annually to The Lawrence Fund — since this giving club was established in 1972. Earl's longtime generous support has helped to maintain and enhance the quality of education at Lawrence.

“Lawrence has provided my family and me with an outstanding education. I am especially grateful for the scholarships that my son Mark received while at Lawrence, which made his education possible,” said Earl. The Lawrence Fund provides Earl with an opportunity to give back by ensuring that students on campus today also have the necessary scholarships and financial aid to achieve the same sort of distinctive Lawrence education that the Berry family has cherished for generations.

66% of all Lawrence Fund dollars are donated by Founders Club members

Game, Set, Match! Trustee Challenge a Success in 2009-10

In spring 2010, Lawrence trustees issued a challenge to all alumni, parents and friends to benefit The Lawrence Fund. Anyone who had not given a gift in fiscal year 2009 would have their entire 2010 gift matched by the trustees. Those who had given in 2009 could increase their gift to the next Giving Club level and have the increase matched. The goal was to motivate past donors to re-join Lawrence's donor ranks and to inspire loyal donors to increase their giving. "Game, Set, Match!" successfully helped the college achieve these goals!

In total, 2,989 alumni, parents and friends took advantage of the opportunity. Of the 1,465 alumni who participated, 64 percent were new donors. A total of 755 parents participated, as well as 769 friends of the college. The trustee match generated $770,561 for The Lawrence Fund! Thank you to our donors and to our devoted trustees. This generosity made a significant and immediate impact on Lawrence's students and faculty.

Preserving Björklunden's History

Björklunden is filled with the artistic talents of Winifred Boynton, who spent countless hours there when it was her family's summer home. While the chapel showcases much of her beautiful handiwork, many of her paintings, carvings, sketches and manuscripts also grace the lodge.

Jordan Severson '11 recognized the need to preserve these gems for future generations. Combining his passion for art with his love for Björklunden and Winifred's work, he came up with a way to guarantee Winifred's work would endure — a Senior Experience project that entailed cataloging Winifred's items through digital photography. Collaborating with Severson is Elizabeth Carlson, assistant professor of art history.

Professor Elizabeth Carlson and Jordan Severson '11

Making Winifred's art accessible to Björklunden visitors is a priority to Severson. Working to document the items with correct descriptions and details will give observers, enthusiasts and Björklunden aficionados the ability to delight in Winifred's art, including some works that have never been on public display. Severson is also preserving Winifred's original artworks using archival-quality materials to prevent deterioration, aging or fading.

When his Senior Experience is completed, Severson said it will provide a comprehensive look at Winifred's vision, ideas and unique methods; her fascination with Scandinavian art; and the exhaustive research and tenacious drive she employed to make her vision a reality. "I hope that my project will enable visitors to better understand the significance of Winifred's oeuvre," he said. "My project will give a more complete view of her methods to demonstrate why her work has become so admired and loved."

Lawrence University gratefully acknowledges Winifred's grandchildren, who have funded Severson's Senior Experience project. Having their own wonderful memories of Björklunden, combined with their generous support, the Boynton family is leaving a lasting legacy by preserving their grandmother's creations for future generations.

For more information on Björklunden or Winifred Boynton and her art, visit Björklunden in person or online at www.lawrence.edu/dept/bjork.

Generations of Excellence — The Siekman Family at Lawrence

For several generations, the Siekman family history has been interwoven with the rich history of Lawrence University. William Siekman '41 followed in his father's footsteps by attending Lawrence. Siekman's late wife, Martha Boyd Siekman '43, was a third generation Lawrence graduate. William and Martha's children, Charley Siekman '72 and Frances (Faffie) Siekman de Romero '74, graduated from Lawrence. Two of William and Martha's grandchildren, Francesca Romero Siekman '11 and Alex Siekman '12, represent a new generation of the family in Lawrence's current student body. In order to honor the strong Siekman family legacy at Lawrence and provide opportunities for all students to benefit from a Lawrence education, Bill and Martha established several Siekman family scholarships.

While each Lawrence student has a unique educational experience, one element unifies all students: financing their education. More than 90 percent of Lawrence students receive some type of financial aid. Fortunately, Lawrence offers generous financial assistance and, because of strong supporters like the Siekman family, named scholarships comprise a significant portion of available aid. While reflecting on her own education, Faffie stated, "My experience at Lawrence taught me that it is an honor and a privilege to serve others. It gave me the tools to make the world a better place. It was volunteerism at Lawrence that changed my life completely." The Siekman family has a long and proud tradition of philanthropy, serving others through generously sharing their time, talents and resources. Each year, new and continuing students are awarded Siekman scholarships to help make their Lawrence education more affordable.

Reflecting on his education, William said, "I remain grateful to this day for the strong foundation my Lawrence education provided, both personally and professionally. The success of our society at a local and national level hinges on a commitment to education, and I am pleased to demonstrate my commitment through the Siekman family scholarships that my wife and I established in honor of our family's many Lawrentians." Now that the Siekman legacy at Lawrence has extended into the next generation, both the Siekman family and the college are looking forward to the next chapter of their shared history.

In fiscal 2009-10, 5,844 alumni or 41.3 percent made a gift to the college. Historically, all Lawrence students have, in effect, been "scholarship students" whether they knew it or not. Full payment of tuition, fees, room and board has never covered all of the costs of a year at Lawrence, and the difference — as much as 35 percent of the actual cost — is met, in large part, by gifts to The Lawrence Fund. (We call it a "hidden grant" that all students receive, in addition to financial aid or merit-based scholarships.)

The Lawrence Fund also provides a financial infrastructure from which new initiatives like Lawrence Fellows and Posse can be launched. It also supports internships, international study programs, cooperative education and independent research.

Thank you to all of the alumni who gave in fiscal year 2009-10. We encourage all alumni and friends of Lawrence to consider a gift to The Lawrence Fund. Lawrence is proud that during the past two decades, alumni participation rates for contributions to its annual fund are among the highest in the country.

VIKING BENCH GOLF OUTING

The second annual Viking Bench Golf Outing was held at Royal St. Patrick's Golf Links in Wrightstown, Wis. Thanks to a generous gift from Richard Boya '52, made in memory of his late brother Donald Boya '50, and a strong turnout from alumni, the event raised $14,000 for the athletics department and its programs. "The attendance this year included as many former Vikings as we have seen over the past five years thanks to the great work of our committee members," said Mike Szkodzinski, director of athletics and head hockey coach. "It was a great day to listen to stories from the past and remember the history of excellence that is Vikings Athletics. We are very appreciative and grateful for not only the financial support from our alumni, but also their continued positive backing of our coaches and student athletes."

The committee included Szkodzinski, Joel Bogenschuetz '98 (football, golf), Jessa Dukelow '02, assistant director of alumni and constituency engagement (basketball), Joel DePagter '98 (basketball, golf), Richard Boya '52 (football), Jamie Reeve '95 (football, golf) and Anne La Francis '98 (volleyball, softball).

If you are interested in supporting the 2011 event, please contact Jessa Dukelow in the Office of Alumni and Constituency Engagement at jessica.m.dukelow@lawrence.edu or 920-832-6916.

Save the date for next year's outing: June 6, 2011.

Funding the Future

The Thomas A. Steitz Nobel Fund for Senior Experience in the Natural Sciences was established in 2010 through a generous gift from Thomas Steitz '62. Steitz was named one of three recipients of the 2009 Nobel Prize in Chemistry. Steitz, now a Howard Hughes Medical Institute investigator at Yale University, was the first Nobel Prize winner in Lawrence history. Along with Venkatraman Ramakrishnan of the Medical Research Council Laboratory of Molecular Biology and Ada E. Yonath of the Weizmann Institute of Science, Steitz was recognized for research on the structure and function of the ribosome. As a Lawrence chemistry major, Steitz worked closely with chemistry professor Robert Rosenberg and was known for his high degree of curiosity.

Senior Experience serves as a bookend to Lawrence's hallmark Freshman Studies program by engaging every Lawrence senior in an academic project demonstrating proficiency in his or her major field of study.

The Steitz Fund supports distinguished Senior Experience projects in the natural sciences and is awarded to students through a competitive application process. Chemistry major Catherine Albright '11 (pictured above, with Steitz) is the first recipient of this prestigious award. Catherine had an opportunity to meet Steitz when he was on the Lawrence campus in June to serve as the commencement speaker. According to Albright, "I was honored to meet Dr. Steitz and be presented with such a wonderful award — it is incredibly generous and kind of him to provide Lawrence with this fund. I was truly inspired by meeting a fellow Lawrentian who has achieved such outstanding accomplishments."

In collaboration with associate professor of chemistry David Hall, Albright is studying asthma exacerbations caused by human rhinovirus infection — in other words, why a patient's asthma gets worse when he or she gets a cold. Catherine uses human macrophages (white blood cells) to characterize the biochemical pathways involved in initiating the inflammatory response caused by the virus as it functions as an agonist. She is studying the prevalence of major versus minor group rhinovirus infections in a college population. In collaboration with the University of Wisconsin-Madison, Catherine tested samples obtained from Lawrence students to investigate which strains of rhinovirus are most prevalent among the 18- to 24-year-old demographic and how this distribution changes over time. The Steitz Fund will support the lab work for the final aspect of her Senior Experience project — a paper outlining a method for teaching an introductory virology laboratory to college students. Catherine plans to submit her paper for publication in early 2011.

CELEBRATING OUTSTANDING VOLUNTEERS

Lawrence trustee emerita Margaret Carroll '61 and community leader Pat Schinabeck (pictured, left to right, respectively) were Lawrence University's nominees for the 13th annual Celebrating Our Volunteers gala sponsored by the Community Foundation for the Fox Valley Region, Inc., and the Appleton Post-Crescent. The event, held on April 10, 2010, honored exceptional Fox Valley volunteers for their contributions in the areas of community service, business/non-profit partnership, healthcare, arts, youth leadership, education and mentoring. Lawrence recognized Pat and Margaret for their vision and leadership in creating the new College Avenue median, which provides a safe and beautiful marker along the primary stretch of College Avenue that bridges the college campus.

Brendan Peters '09 is the youngest member of The Founders Club. "Lawrence University, its students and its staff have changed who I am as a person in the best possible way. It is a personal, understanding institution of higher learning that encourages all of its students to reach their greatest potential. I joined Founders Club because the Lawrence experience has given me so much; it is only right to give something back," said Peters.

CAMPAIGN NEWS

More Light! ON THE ROAD

More Light! is a commitment to build on the success of the university and to firmly establish Lawrence as a liberal arts education leader. Evoking traditions of two great institutions, Lawrence College and Milwaukee-Downer College, More Light! builds on their mottos: "Light, More Light!" and "Sit Lux" ("Let there be light"), in which light symbolizes truth and knowledge.

More Light!, the most ambitious fund-raising campaign in Lawrence University history, entered its third year with a host of events designed to bring the momentum of the campaign to alumni regions throughout the country.

Hosted by President Jill Beck and members of the Lawrence University Board of Trustees, the More Light! events feature presenters sharing stories of "innovation through collaboration," the theme chosen for Lawrence's 2010-11 academic year. Four areas are highlighted: research, public service, environmental activism and performance. The events will continue to feature talented Lawrence students who serve as musicians, performers and presenters.

Last year, the More Light! events showcased the award-winning Warch Campus Center, the Lawrence Fellows program, the Senior Experience program and the Green Roots environmental initiative.

These events would not be possible without the dedication and support of Lawrence alumni and friends. Hundreds of volunteers have shaped and supported these events. Volunteers served as event hosts, assisted with venue selection, reached out to alumni in their areas to encourage attendance, provided housing for student musicians and served as event speakers.

Thanks to the many alumni, parents and friends who have brought More Light! to cities around the country.

MILWAUKEE-DOWNER ALUMNAE CONTINUE TRADITION OF GIVING

Milwaukee-Downer College was a pioneering institution for women's education. It consolidated with Lawrence College in 1964 to form Lawrence University, and its legacy remains strong at Lawrence. Today, Lawrence still counts more than 1,500 Milwaukee-Downer women among its alumnae, with hundreds of them supporting the college annually through volunteerism, gifts to The Lawrence Fund and other purposes, and as members of the Lawrence-Downer Legacy Circle. Special thanks to the 348 alumnae who donated $93,380 in fiscal year 2010.

50th Reunion | Green Class of 1959 | $20,235

The Milwaukee-Downer College Green Class of 1959 celebrated its 50th Reunion in October 2009 on its historic campus in Milwaukee. The class achieved 53 percent participation in the class gift and raised funds for an endowed scholarship with its big sister Red Class of 1958. The scholarship will carry on the legacy of Milwaukee-Downer and its classes by providing annual financial assistance to a deserving female student.

Parents Donate $783,363 in fiscal 2009-10

Since our daughter, Caitlin, arrived at Lawrence in the fall of 2005, we have been exceedingly impressed with the education provided to the students. We initially joined the Parents Association Steering Committee as the freshman class chairs. Finding fulfillment in our work, we heightened our involvement and served as the national co-chairs for the past four years. We saw it as a responsibility and an honor to build upon the excellence that parents before us began. We enjoy our volunteer association with Lawrence, which has given us the opportunity to become better informed about the unique attributes of the academic program and to see the tangible results that our gifts make in enhancing the lives of students. We celebrated Caitlin's graduation in June and will miss visiting the campus regularly for performances and other occasions, but look forward to continuing to support such a wonderful institution.

Special thanks to the 2,079 parents of current and former students who contributed $280,710 to The Lawrence Fund and $502,653 in gifts for the Warch Campus Center, endowed scholarships and other restricted purposes, for a total of $783,363. Parent support helps bridge the gap between tuition and endowment revenues and the actual cost of providing a Lawrence education, ensuring the overall strength of the college's academic offerings and other programs. Thank you also to the Parents Association Steering Committee for their volunteer support raising funds, representing Lawrence at high schools and college fairs, and attending university events.

We are pleased to welcome and recognize Ken and Amy Brengel P'06, '09, '12, '14 as the incoming national co-chairs. Deepest thanks to all of the parents who support this wonderful university.

While alumni and parents have a natural connection to Lawrence, friends who choose to donate to the college's mission do so for a variety of important reasons. These gifts are uniquely meaningful, since they broaden our donor family to include those who work and teach at Lawrence, those who live in the community and those who appreciate the college's focus on individualized learning. The support of Lawrence's friends allows the college to offer enriching programs and concerts to the community and to make the campus a vital educational and cultural resource for our neighbors.

“We both see Lawrence as a critical part of our current career success. The improvements in the campus are striking, and we are happy to play a part in contributing to them. We realize that scholarships really make a difference for Lawrence and its students. We like to attend campus events, including concerts and sports, and like to give back. We visited many campuses during our daughter’s recent college search, and always compared them to LU. We believe firmly in the education Lawrence offers.”

THE GENEROSITY OF STRANGERS

Entrepreneur. Biology professor. Basketball coach. State budget and policy analyst. Symphony outreach director. AIDS vaccine researcher. Like dozens of other Lawrence alumni over the last three decades, these diverse professionals share a common bond: they were all recipients of the Kohler Endowed Scholarship.

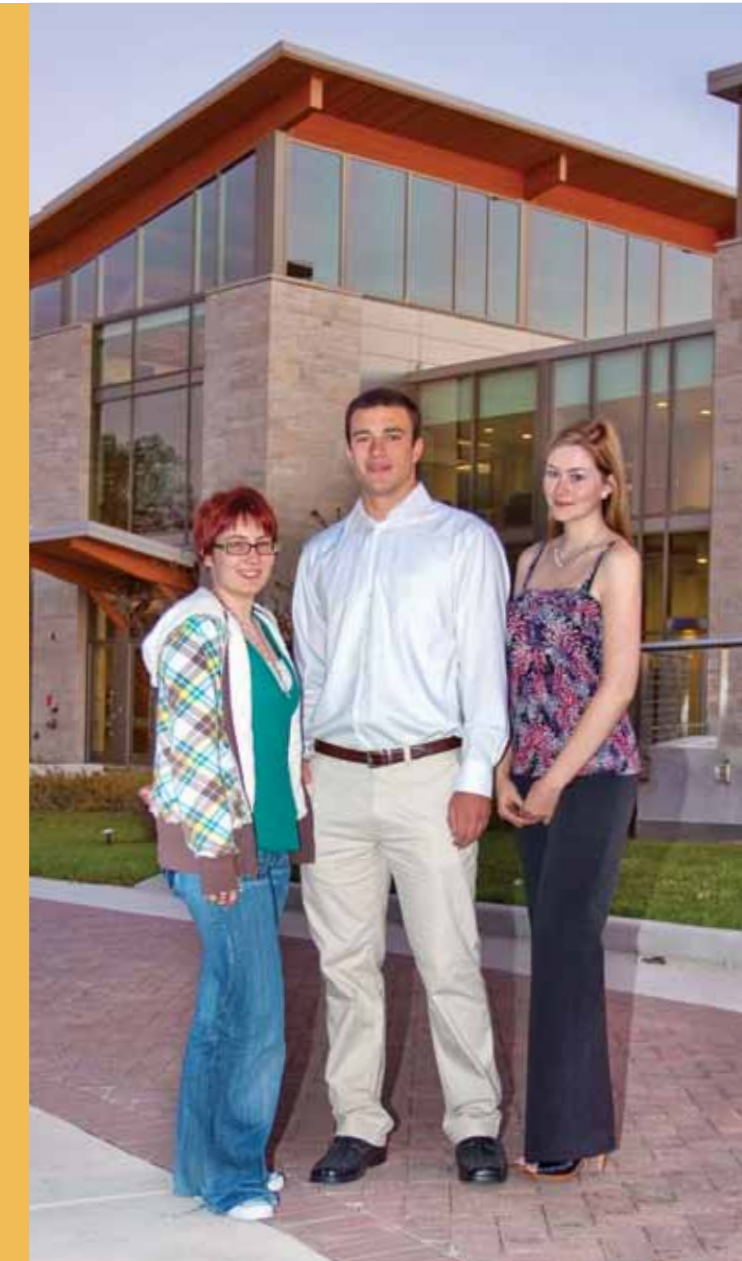

Funded primarily by the Kohler Trust for the Arts and Education, the Kohler Endowed Scholarship — like all endowed scholarships — is a gift to the future, a contribution to the good work that will someday be done by the students who receive it. Laura Kohler, chair of the Kohler Trust for the Arts and Education, said, "Lawrence is a jewel in the state of Wisconsin, and we are proud to invest in the kind of remarkable students that Lawrence attracts. We can only imagine the great things these young people will accomplish."

Resli Costabell '85, among the first recipients of the Kohler Endowed Scholarship, said the scholarship not only made it possible for her to attend Lawrence instead of a local public university, but also influenced her own commitment to philanthropy. "Lawrence was formative. I grew as a student and as a human being. I like the human being I've become, and am intensely grateful to those who helped make it possible. Strangers were generous to me; now it gives me huge pleasure to pass the favor on to other strangers."

Classmate and fellow Kohler scholar Timothy X. Troy '85 shares Costabell's commitment to pay it forward. Thirty years ago Troy was a high school student hoping to follow his two older brothers to Lawrence. "I knew that Lawrence was the right environment for me, but the cost would have been out of reach without the help of the Kohler Endowed Scholarship." Today he is back in the classroom at Lawrence, this time as J. Thomas and Julie Esch Hurvis Professor of Theatre and Drama. "I'm able to give back by ensuring that each student I encounter in the classroom and the rehearsal hall has the same mix of challenge and encouragement that shaped my undergraduate experience."

The newest Kohler scholars — Samuel Ausloos '13, Erin Fredrick '12 and Amanda Anderson '12 — weren't even born yet when the Kohler Endowed Scholarship was established. And that is the wonderful, extraordinary thing about an endowed scholarship — it is a gift not just once, but for generations.

COLLABORATION IN ACTION: THE MIELKE FAMILY FOUNDATION

Dating back to the turn of the century, Lawrence and the Mielke family have sustained a strong and collaborative partnership, which started with Sarah Mielke, Class of 1916, and Ruth Mielke, Class of 1914, who pursued higher education at a time when it was uncommon for women to attend college. Since then, this partnership has blossomed thanks to support from three generations of family members and the generosity of the Mielke Family Foundation, which received the first Lawrence University Collaboration in Action Award at the annual Report to the Community event held in September. This award recognizes individuals or organizations that, in collaboration with Lawrence University, have provided exemplary service to the Fox Cities community.

Since 1996, the Mielke Family Foundation has partnered with Lawrence and Stewart Purkey, associate professor of education and Bee Connell Mielke Professor of Education (one of two Mielke family professorships at Lawrence), on the Mielke Summer Institute in the Liberal Arts held at Lawrence's northern campus, Björklunden. Every summer, the institute provides approximately 25 educators from Appleton and Shawano with the opportunity to examine a theme of cultural or social significance from a multidisciplinary perspective. The 2010 institute theme was Crossing Borders: Expressions and Issues of Ethnicity.

"In an intellectually rich and challenging environment," said Purkey, "teachers are literally immersed in learning and exploring new ideas, kindling (or perhaps rekindling) the passion for learning which is characteristic of the very best educators — a passion that ultimately, in myriad ways, affects and enriches what they do in their own classrooms and buildings. Thanks to the funding originally provided by the Mielke Family Foundation, thanks to John and Sally Mielke's faith and trust in Appleton's and Shawano's teachers and staff, and thanks to their ongoing, enthusiastic support and counsel on the Summer Institute's advisory board, the Summer Institute exists and continues to offer local educators this tremendously valuable experience."

Sally and Dr. John Mielke

Lawrence is also proud to partner with the Mielke Family Foundation, University of Wisconsin-Fox Valley, the Appleton Area School District and a number of other community organizations on research and education in the areas of nutrition, creativity and medical ethics. "For nearly 100 years Lawrence University has been, and continues to be, a platform for our family and the community to enrich people's lives through the basic process of education," said Dr. John and Sally Mielke.

Lawrence remains grateful to the Mielke Family Foundation for its ongoing support of Lawrence and commitment to making the Fox Cities an outstanding place to call home.

THE BERTRAND A. GOLDGAR LONDON FELLOWSHIP

Students, family and friends established this endowed fellowship in memory of Professor Goldgar — the longest-serving full-time member of the faculty in Lawrence University history. It will be awarded to a current Lawrentian, preferably an English major or minor, to follow in his footsteps by spending some productive and inspiring time in London in the haunts of the great: Swift, Addison, Fielding and Goldgar. The fellowship will generally be awarded for one term or for a summer/winter break on a competitive basis to students who intend to do independent research in London. The funding, which supports travel and other related expenses, will support one or two students per year. To date, 166 alumni and friends have contributed $102,528.

If each alumnus or alumna who has made a gift to Lawrence within the past three fiscal years gave every year, our participation rate would be

LAWRENCE UNIVERSITY
APPLETON, WISCONSIN

A River Retreat

Dedicated in August, the Riverwalk and Gilboy Ring provide the Lawrence and Fox Valley communities with places for retreat and reflection along the scenic Fox River. Lawrence remains grateful to the generous supporters who helped make this project possible, including the Ruth St. John and John Dunham West Foundation and Steve '62 and Joan Gilboy. This new space is further enhanced thanks to a gift of Shona sculptures from David and Susan Friend Barnett '81 and educational signage created by Michael Gross, professor of environmental interpretation at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

CLOCKWISE FROM TOP LEFT: President Jill Beck, students and faculty involved with the design and construction of the Riverwalk and the generous individuals who helped make it possible; Shona sculpture "Beggar" gifted in memory of James M. Auer '50; John and Bernadine Zimmer P'89 on behalf of the Ruth St. John and John Dunham West Foundation; Shona sculpture "Mother and Children" gifted in memory of Philip M. and Ethel Barnett; President Jill Beck with Steve '62 and Joan Gilboy.
