2011 AWARD FOR EXCELLENCE IN SCHOLARSHIP
PETER GLICK

Your work on the research in social attitudes toward men and women has led to many highly respected publications and has earned you national and international acclaim. In the past two years alone, you have been co-editor of a book, Handbook of Prejudice, Stereotyping, and Discrimination, and a special journal issue on ambivalent sexism, published in the journal Sex Roles. Your co-written textbook, The Social Psychology of Gender: How Power and Intimacy Shape Gender Relations, has been reissued in a paperback edition. Your research has been recognized by the Harvard Business Review in “The HBR List: Breakthrough Ideas for 2009.” Your achievements have led the members of the Society of Experimental Social Psychology to elect you as their President and to an impressive list of editorial board assignments and invited addresses. Your research program has included a large number of published articles and book chapters, including work done in conjunction with Lawrence students. Your theoretical and empirical analyses of the difficult, stubborn problem of ambivalent sexism have caught the interest of a large segment of the academic community, and have been cited literally thousands of times. Your research combines well defined empirical studies, careful analysis and clear, insightful writing. Sexism is clearly an issue of great contemporary concern, and your insights into its origins represent an important example of how well conducted academic scholarship can address meaningful social issues.

In recognition of your many scholarly contributions, and in anticipation of many more contributions to come, I am extremely pleased to present you with the 2011 Award for Excellence in Scholarship.
