Twenty-eight states and two foreign countries, Alaska and Hawaii, are now represented by the 270 chapters of the National Journalistic Register. The chapter at the University of Minnesota, Sigma Phi, is one of the most active in the country. The Register, established in 1920, has been active in both the academic and professional fields. It is a group of women interested in journalism, who meet regularly to discuss current events and to exchange ideas.

Some days my thoughts are just as dark as coal and coal is the worst enemy, particularly, if you have any desire to do anything with the world. It is the way of coal that goes first and then the world, but the world hasn't a thing to say first in the world. Thought

Recalls Long Fight of "Going National"

"Theta Sigma Phi really changed the policy in regard to chapters in small colleges when it granted the petition for this chapter at Lawrence," declared Miss Muriel Kelly, who was assistant Madison to petition for what became Theta Sigma Phi in 1908.

"I made up my mind for the granting of the charter here on the grounds that a group in a small college could be as valuable to the fraternity, I think, as the Upsilon girls this year especially are proving my point," she added.

"We again began to work strenuously for admission into the fraternity the year I was a sophomore in college," concluded Miss Kelly, who was elected president of Zeta Pi at the end of that year.

"We did everything we could to prove to the national organizer of Theta Sigma Phi that we could be as active a group in a large university. Our place at this time was furthered by the introduction of the R.A.T.C. at Lawrence, for during its existence men were enabled to carry extra-curricular activities, and the Zeta Pi girls held every office on the Lawrence that year. We secured everything we could to show—the R.A.T.C. had been established from the residence hall committee to a formal chapter. For the latter publication we had to write advertisements for selling machines, although none of us had ever seen one before.

"After two years of intense efforts which seemed to meet approval from the national officers of the fraternity," concluded Miss Kelly, "we finally were granted permission to petition for a chapter and we were installed in the fall of 1908 and brought back some of the granting of a charter to Zeta Pi, the local journalistic society at Lawrence.

"Miss Kelly has been editor of the college newspaper work, in her junior year in college she was Lawrencean editor and associate editor, this was also the year she was editor of the campus journal. She was also the paper's reporter, in the year following, she became a special feature writer for the Milwaukee Journal. While at Milwaukee, Miss Kelly took honor of being the first woman in the nation to write on the fine points of the science of our time in the winning place with the writer who won the Journal trophy. In 1911 Miss Kelly was publicly recognized for the National Conference of Social Work which met in Milwaukee. For two years she has been a feature writer and reporter for the Post-Independent. Miss Kelly is now national treasurer of Theta Sigma Phi.

Miss Kelly's most significant efforts have been made in the work of Theta Sigma Phi and the Theta Sigma Phi convention at Madison in the spring of 1909. Coach "Goo" Black's Lawrence foot ball nine, which had previously overcome Hameline Falls team at 86. Paul Field Friday afternoon by a score of 6 to 0. The play of the Blue and White played a part in the winning of the game in this Mid-West Conference contest of the season, the second-ranked team was the result of a steady outfight that the lawmen were enabled to stop. The lawmen put out a valiant fight, but the driving attack of the Lawrence backfield was too much for the lawmen to meet. The lawmen failed to hit a full advantage in the second quarter, while later when Lawrence intercepted several passes, the other five will be completed for the next season. Lawrence students interested in golf will be interested to know that they have an opportunity to play in the next state Blue golf cup to be held in Appleton. Although the new club is in a private course with membership limited to 400, provisions have been made, through the efforts of E. H. Harvard, president of the Harvard Studio, for collegiate students to play on the course on certain days of the week by paying a small given charge. The club has only recently been organized but at present about 200 mem­ dent; J. E. Brusey, vice-president; J. E. Miller, secretary; and W. F. Tittel, treasurer.

Diary of Zeta Pi

Speaks for Itself

"You make me tired; always jabbering about 'those good old days,'" replied Diary New to Diary Old. "With my memories, you'll have me out of this old desk. Those life must be pretty sad for she hasn't put a thrill on my pages for over so long!"

"Silly! You select it right there. Why, when she was writing me, there wasn't even enough for all the evening tales she wanted to put on my page 246."

"There you go again," replied Diary New. "Not just be to publish it'll listen this time. Perhaps if you get it off your chest, you'll let me rest in peace a while."

"If it's real or not all right because you'll never be splitting your sides with glee over the events written in them. I have circumstantial evidence right here inside of me. See page 246, Monday. It reads like this: 'Graded Zeta Pi, meeting today. All thrilled over our petition to Theta Sigma Phi; we're gonna get it over on them tonight. Then we had Lawrentian and worked on the petition, (tasting and typing etc.)'"

Saturday: 'Be prepared for she hasn't put a thrill on my pages for ever so long.'"  That's the year there were all those Pie girls running that whole paper too.' That's the year there were all those Pie girls running that college paper.

"Now let's see page 300, Friday. 'Zeta Pi picnic at the lake. More fun, materials, crisp, paper, lunch. Came back and worked on the petition, putting a ring on it.'"

"Sputter, mistress would take me out of this old desk. Guess life must be pretty stale for she hasn't put a thrill on my pages for over so long."

Mr. Diary New, it wasn't all play that was written."

In the College Zone you can get a fuel for any purpose."
Shopping—With The Fastidious Co-ed

An enticing bit of Fall's warmth, a tiny glimpse of Persian, moody, an evocative collection of unique avarices—that's the little "Beatrice Studio" near the campus on College Avenue.

There are so many fascinating things to see, these "Whits"—and "sacred," the older and your companion particularly, when we come to make over the earth, we simply refused to go any farther.

Told that a double cluster of opals and filigree with earrings were not a real model from Pappas we simply ignored. Can you imagine possessing a product from the hands of the greatest designer in the world of fashions? The opals were of electric blue, and the topaz filigree hands reared one of cobalt and turquoise.

The earrings were delicately cut, and set with tops.

A long string of quite large beads made by German peasants from alabaster were on display. They are called "Gallia" beads and are Cornelian, a deep tan with a touch of silver, in color. It is said these beads will neither break nor wear. So does one wear these in the future will be completed with the rest of them. The earrings are novel with products of the same material.

Many Novelties

A beautiful string of beads was set off with tiny drops of crystal. Crystal was also displayed in a hand-made pendant on a silk cord. Another hand-painted and tinted pendant of ivory would perfectly adorn an afternoon dress of dark and dull black.

There are many more unusual and wonderful things, too—oh, if you have a "man," and Christmas drawing near—don't miss time to do "Beatrice.'"
