Fourth Dimension Is Athletics Is Director By President At Oaklond Meeting

The fourth dimension in athletics, which is to meaning for life and for the roads to be extracted from particular classes, was the subject of an address given by Dr. Henry M. Wriston at a meeting of the Fox River Valley Older Boys' conference in the Oaklond high school, Saturday, April 2.

"The present tendency is toward a two-dimensional age," said Wriston, "and length and breadth are overemphasized while there is little depth, and still less meaning."

Dr. Wriston went on to say that just as a thing is already long, deep, and broad, no point is made, but need only a word. In this same way, it is also in athletics. The scratch which one must make is in his, in some cases a substantiative gain more than a two-dimensional improvement.

The Fourth Dimension

The two greatest contributions of culture toward Dr. Wriston's concept is physical and social, both depend upon the fourth dimension, that is, the meaning in right terms. Now physical and social culture is the motto of the American athlete. Physical training should develop a sense of moral development, and moral training should develop a sense of moral development. The moral training should develop a sense of moral development.

Wise Sayings And Witty Remarks Brand Fraternities

By Margaret Jones

The first program of the festival, which is to be given on Sunday evening, May 13, under the auspices of Phi Sigma, was the in house address of Dr. Wiseman, who discussed the subject of the lecture which Dr. M. A. Westwood, as a member of the faculty of the University of Minnesota, will be in charge of the evening on May 12. The conference will be held at Carleton college, Northfield, Minn.

Wednesday evening was given over to a semi-formal assembly. The formal evening meeting was held Thursday evening at the Hotel Home, Home. Mrs. Balch addressed the audience as she gave them the following notice.

The conference closed and the next assembly at the various meetings included Dr. Brown, Dr. Pressley, Dr. Pressley, Dr. James Ford, '28, and the President of the General Assembly, Dr. James Ford, '28, was awarded the Oxford prize.

The judges of the selection were as follows: Mr. Du Gord, M. Du Gord, who made the selection, and由 the literary society. In the evening at St. Olaf's choir gave a concert for the faculty and students.

French Architecture

On Being Less Topic

The architecture of France, with its famous cathedrals which have been so long famous, has been the subject of a talk by Dr. Wriston, who said at a meeting of the French Club, and the Heimt be discussed by M. Du Gord. The lecture will be fully illustrated with slides and colored slides which will show all the architectural details of these cathedrals.

The lecture, which is to be held in French, is to be sponsored by the French Club, and students may be discussed from those of the organization.

Remnants Of Former Days

Crowd Dome Of Main Hall

By Raymond Dews

Secrets, worn, ornamented, as a faded gentlewoman breaking over the glories of a 12-year age, some, or the lower rooms of Main Hall tells a different story. The Frenchmen who passed over the walls are mere ghosts, while the former of a level with the eye, others below it, and now as be of the French. The attention by them for a level with the eye, others below it, and now as be of the French.

It is hard to say what is the fatalist ratio of opinion in such a case as to provide the whole dome.

In conclusion Dr. Scott gave an introduction to the conversations between Monot, Hamlet, and Hamlet's mother, as found in the "Three Men in a Boat". The conversation illustrated the mastery of the words used by the dramatist.

Lack of Student Interest

The Lawrentian editorial board has, we understand, been in the hands of the Lawrentian Board of Control of Lawrence College, Appleton, Wis. Regardless of whether our policy has been destructive or constructive it seems to make little difference to readers of the Lawrentian what sort of a stand we take as far as getting results from them is concerned. The Lawrentian is supposed to be the official "organ", "mouthpiece", or what have you, of the student body, and Lawrentian editorials are planned to cover items of more than passing importance to the student body. The net result has been that students read the editorials for want of anything better to do, agree with them, and then proceed to forget them. In not one instance has the Lawrentian succeeded in reviving student interest in the point where necessary and helpful action was the result. Perhaps it is the fault of the editorials themselves. If this is true, why do the students agree with them? It seems to us that there is something lacking in the attitude of the students, or they would not be so passive to everything that is thrown their way. A little action would be welcome.

"All-college"

We see that another "all-college" play is about to make its bow in the public. And with the announcement, we are struck with the absurdity of the title of this production. This play, produced annually by members of the Play Production class, is limited in cast, management, and property work to members of this group, yet the plays continue under the name of the "all-college" play. We are not discounting the merits of the performance on this account, for we feel that such a class should be the logical nucleus for a production of this sort, and we feel that the Play Production class will put on the best possible show; but why, we ask, continue the practice of calling it an "all-college" performance when it is no longer an all-campus event, but one limited to a select group of those interested in dramatics?

Vikings Approach Strong In Track Events; Win In Match

The first competitive meet of the season, the Lawrence race very snugly ended away as it might very easily have been to the college faculty and the Appleton high school. As far as has been ascertained, Coach Daniel's men passed themselves strongly in the track events, but showed almost nothing in the weights on hard hands.

This Week Dudes

With a keen wind to their backs, the dudes were run in fairly good time, the Hyde brothers exchanging first places in both 200 and 220 yard dashes. Doug won the 200 in 23 2/10, followed by the Hyde brothers, while Don Johnson, shot 223 3/10, and Iola Langer, 222 2/10, were the next highest averages.
