Three Cagers Are Honored

Bigger, Shavik, Laird On All Conference Teams

Three Lawrence basketball stars were selected on the latest First and Second team, selected by coaches and officials of the conference, and announced yesterday. Bigger was moved up on the first team, Bigger, Shavik, Shavik, and Laird, were named on the second team.

The result of the vote also removed a source of doubt from the minds of those who feared the plan would not be accepted. The result was a source of great satisfaction to those to whom the project is vital, and such success is certain. The plan already has received a fine impetus on its way to complete its success.

The "natural speed" of American speech is increasing, according to some latest reports. It used to be no trouble for an average stenographer to take an average of five hundred words a minute, as the "fast talkers" insisted, what is the use? Especially if, as some critics insist, we use more words to say less.

The moral result of this vote is most important. By their action "the leaders in the movement are showing the others how to go about it," as the old saying goes. The moral result of this vote also removed a source of doubt from the minds of those who feared the plan would not be accepted.

Students Approval

By a vote of 539 to 156 the student body yesterday approved the plan to send a good will student to Europe. Student opinion has thus sanctioned the move by a majority of four to one, and the fact is that the campaign has been a most successful one. The ballot is a most significant one, of great satisfaction to those to whom the project is vital, and such success is certain. The plan already has received a fine impetus on its way to complete its success.

Joseph Sehneller, '30, and Hayward Slavik, '30, are both placed on the mythical Little Four Conference basketball team picked by the Lawrence, Wisconsin, American and the Little Four city newspapers.

Laid, Riggers named

Lawrence and Carroll were represented by two positions each on the first team, with Ripon filling fifth berth. Poore and Sehneller were on the second string selections, with Lawrence, Carroll and Ripon each placing one man.

Riggers, a sophomore, and playing his first year of interstate college basketball, shares, as does Poore, the honors of one of the best backs in Midwest and Little Four leagues for some time. He led the Vikings in scoring and was regarded by opposing coaches as one of the chief targets of the season. His fast and hard driving offense, in addition to his remarkable ability to break up by his creative attack, place him at the top of the list. Cliff Halverson, of Ripon, is chosen as Riggers' running mate at forward. Halverson was effective in his position and forward position and filled both with first rate ability. His necessary eye for the fast break, his versatility and his ability to connect for a field goal accounted for a major portion of Ripon's success.

Komhoff, of Carroll, tops the list of centers. His chief complaint was forced to Laid, who at best was an even match for the long Ripon jumper.

Sehneller and Slavik are chosen as guards from a field of strong competition. Both were exceptionally versatile. Sehnelt led the Carroll scoring attack in almost every game, in addition to being a major portion of the Pioneer defensive work. He scored the ball down the floor, almost single handed, in many instances, to place his team in a winning position or to convert for a field goal himself. Slavik, a forward both during the early part of the season, and later shifted to guard, where he was for the most effective.

It's no wonder there are so many registrations of different teams in the Midwest and Little Four Conference. A real ball played in these conferences is no joke, and on any given day, we can be expected to come from. Any one of the selections is a base for their outstanding team.
