We are grateful to the donors who have made greater Alexander gymnasium a reality. Helen Ziegler gave for the gymnasium on the condition that the college extension program be carried farther than the gym. This program is to be denney's "sport for every man" program. The finest facilities wishes.

Lawrence's fame as a good school and to bring students to the campus, it is needless to say that they would have been much higher universities.

Although Lawrence athletes have always been kept on a high plane, it is needless to say that they would have been much higher—and the gymnastic facilities been more complete. For many years, the old Alexander gym has been too small to accommodate the Lawrence sport program.

The playing floor was too small for efficient basketball practice, facilities for indoor track were very cramped and indoor football drill was an impossibility. None of these drawbacks to the betterment of athletes will be found in the new building, with its three basketball courts, and its indoor roller rink, curling a ground floor, where field events may be practiced under outdoor conditions.

Of the three major varsity sports, the new gym will probably do the most for basketball. No longer will it be necessary for Coach Donen to scout the country for practice courts during the season. The Armony is unsuitable because of roller skating and dancing.

It will mean the Lawrence mentor will be able to drill his cage up on the same regulation court every night. And it also means that he will be able to hold fall and spring basketball practices if he wishes.

No longer will cage opponents be able to lay their defeat at the hands of the forwards who knew that the game was played on a rolling risk.

Lawrence college should indeed be grateful to the benefactors who have made such an improvement possible.
