January "Alumnus" Features History of College Paper

Featured in the January number of the "Lawrence Alumnus" is a history of the "Lawrentian" by Miss Klumb, '79, who writes of the paper's 62 years' existence first at Lawrence University, then in the college. Miss Klumb writes: "At the beginning of this history 'The Lawrentian' is not. Its antecedents, however, are preserved between sturdy covers, a bit mellowed with age.

"The Lahrentian's editorial policy is introduced with: "The object of The Collegian is, like the theoretical education of the student, 'to become a well-rounded individual.' This was true in 1870 when the paper was started, and has continued. 'The Lawrentian' was produced in small editions for the students, 'the faculty, and the public.

Miss Klumb's recent inactivity is mentioned in the story which Dr. Darling told of them. "The Lawrentian" is a little newspaper which the students are to print their own death notices, the competition having become too strenuous."

"The prediction was," Miss Klumb continues, "that the new journal was to appear in January, 1876, but—no trace of it can be found until October, 1880. 'The Collegian and Neoterian' were started.

"After a gap of two years volume 1 number 1 of 'The Lawrentian' appeared in May, 1884, as a 16 page monthly of the theological society.

"The slogan 'America's Greatest College Weekly,' which has appeared on the front page of the sheet for many years was dropped in January, 1914. No longer a weekly, 'The Lawrentian' was issued twice a week, every Tuesday and Friday. Previous editors for now Lawrence college will boast a 62 year record. Miss Klumb writes in conclusion.
