The CRIMINAL CODE

One of the most regrettable features about the educational system in any institution of learning is cheating in written exams.

Educators are aware that this evil exists and there have been many attempts to curb it. The most severe punishment a college can impose upon a student—that of immediate expulsion—has been adopted widely as a penalty when a student is apprehended. However, even this drastic punishment is not always effective in stopping cheating, and professors and student governing bodies are still seeking a plan by which cheating can be eradicated.

At Lawrence the Student Senate has devised a plan, which, if carried out successfully, will prevent the amount of cheating at Lawrence. Through a committee representing each department in the college, the Senate has adopted a plan which is designed to prevent cheating. Members of the committees will not turn in names. The instance only will be cited and the matter passed on to the Senate plant to make professors aware of the amount of cheating prevalent in their particular departments.

While this knowledge may help to some extent in bringing the practice of this evil to an end, it is not generally believed that it will be highly successful. The reason is obvious. Even though a professor may be aware of several instances of cheating, he is not able to watch everyone at the same time, and the clever ones of whom there are many, continue their underhand work, knowing that nothing, but getting by easily.

It is a ticklish situation, and when the smoke is cleared away the difficulty reverts back to one thing. And that is a sort of a CRIMINAL CODE which all society has adopted—a code against the squander. Cheating could be stopped easily if every class had in it nothing, but getting by easily.

The CRIMINAL CODE is wrong. All of us know that. He who sells a false story for a false price is a cheat. The selling of a false story by a student is just as wrong as the selling of a false story by a publisher. The cheat becomes a martyr .... he has been horribly abused . . . perjury.

Some difficulty reverts back to one thing. And that is a sort of a CRIMINAL CODE to accept as a fellow classmate the man who cheats.

But who would accept a job of this nature? In the first place, no squealer. Cribbing could be stopped easily if every class had in it nothing, but getting by easily.

Greek Sports Heads Discuss Rule Changes

It was unfortunate that the home cage season came to such an ending Saturday night. The Kohawks played against them, but their basketball that Louisville didn't have a chance to play good basketball. We only wish we were playing Carroll again.

An out-of-bounds play worked to perfection in the second half, and Boutie Hall dove for a perfect put shot. This was one of the three or four Viking plays that worked during the night. The Riponers were completely bled and mixed up on Denney's black-off play, but the inability of Biggers and Haase to hit the hoop kept the Viking total down.

But as in other sports, basketball has its ups and downs. Coe defeated Beloit by 26 points, and Beloit beat Lawrence by three points, and we were from Coe by 20 points. How just what does all that mean? Ripon beat Coe 42 to 30, while our own out-

A revision was made in the basketball schedule to allow the three games postponed from Jan. 26 to be played. On Feb. 9, in addition to Delta St. U., the Vikes will play the Po, Chi, and Theta Phi will clash with the Taus. Deke Sigma will play the Sig Eps on March 7. There are no changes or additions to the schedule for tomorrow.

May Oop Squad Meet

The old question of eliminating members of all freshmen and varsity squads from inter-fraternity sports was suggested and is now under consideration at the various homes. If a rule is passed excluding these men, it will go into effect next year. The rules at present state that men who have won as "L" in a sport cannot compete in basketball, and cannot equal basketball players cannot compete in football or track and field.

New rule would prevent any man to a fresh man or varsity squad from competing in that sport.

Another question now being considered at the fraternity houses is the possibility of including a track meet in the intramural program. The matter is now up for consideration and soon will be voted on again.

Professor Crow Offers Plan To Increase Efficiency Of Democracy

Democracy, a form of government in which office holders will be found who will do in their duty and responsibility to do "what ought to be done" rather than "what some being was" emphasized in an address delivered by Prof. William Crow, head of the political science department of Lawrence College at convocation Friday.

In discussion of his decision that a more efficient government is necessary in federal, state, and civic affairs, Professor Crow enumerated four improvements which would make, he believes, a better country, with a stronger democracy.

Civic Plans

The plan for increasing democracy as outlined by Professor Crow, carried four cards as follows: (1) "We elect too many federal and state officials. In this respect, most of us are so disturbed by the necessity of our task as if we were rendered constitutionally incapable of blame by the laws of the state. We are blinded by the show of democratic forces ruled by gaunters who would take away or substitute something in place of our democratic government (2) Abolishment of the two house system in government, a corrupt form, was recommended by the speaker. It was used since government began, but now it is justified only in that it has tradition behind it, Professor Crow declared. He continued the system because it plays in the hands of political jobbers, because it is expensive, and because it is antiquated. (3) Greater emphasis on experimentation in government would provide experts who would not be on top but on tap. Problems could be solved by people who would have non-partisan approach to those problems. To quote John Stewart Mills, "Mediocrity has no place in government affairs." (4) Dr. Crow concluded his address by advocating the fourth of his principles which would revamp and improve the civil service, whereby the methods of the government would be improved through a more efficient service in this field.
