The French, Spanish, and German departments of Lawrence College are present four dramas this evening in the Memorial chapel. The program will start at 8 o'clock. Songs by the students of each department are to be an added feature of the presentation.

The French play, "Maître Pierre Pathelin," is a classic of the sixteenth century. The plot centers about the dealings of Pathelin, a struggling young lawyer, his wife, Monseigneur Guillaume the draper, and a sheep in the draper's service. Pathelin, in a fit of pique, declares a plan to relieve the draper of six yards of cloth without the customary remuneration by ripping it down when the draper is not looking. The shepherd seeks the professional services of Pathelin, when his employer acquires a taste for stitching shoes.

At the trial, which is held in the street, Pathelin is recognized by the draper as the very student who lost him five francs. The trial ends in disorder, and in the confusion the shepherd departs leaving behind him "half a service rendered." The draper has lost six yards of cloth and Pathelin is in turn, half his loot; theirs be the fame.

Two Spanish Plays

Two one-act plays are to be presented by the students of Spanish. One, "(Whatever You Wish)," by Alba later, is a short comedy which revolves around the visits of strangers to a house, and the accidental presence of a woman who was supposed to be a man in the house. The other play, "Las Arenas," by Joaquin, is a sort of romance with the modernity of the present day. A woman is present at the performance of the play to which she has failed to accomplish over the years. The woman's voice has agreed to meet him after the performance for a final farewell and finally, by using every persuasive power and argument pertinent to women, she convinces her husband that she will be his wife. Happy over his triumph, the husband states, "Ah, man, he is a lion or a lamb, but always himself the other.

The play presented by the Spanish group, "La Perla," by Joaquin Quintero, is a lot of more serious. It is a play about the philosophy of life that has been brought about since her encounters. The play opens as a meeting between two women, one of whom has been widowed, and the other who is a widow. The widow, who is a widow, has been widowed, and the other who is a widow. The play opens as a meeting between two women, one of whom has been widowed, and the other who is a widow. The drama is centered around the lives of these widows, and the impact of their widows' clubs on their lives.

The German play, "Cinderella," is a story of a young girl who lives in a poverty-stricken household. One day, she is invited to a ball by her stepmother, who is the queen of the kingdom. Cinderella is excited to attend the ball, but her stepmother imposes strict rules that she must follow in order to be allowed to attend. Cinderella follows these rules, and is eventually allowed to attend the ball. At the ball, she meets a handsome prince, and they fall in love. However, Cinderella must leave before the clock strikes midnight, or she will be thrown out of the house and remain alone.

In the second scene, the prince and Cinderella are revealed in their true forms, and they are able to be together without the fear of being discovered. However, the stepmother and her sisters use their power to separate them, and Cinderella is forced to return to her small, impoverished home.

The plot of the play is filled with elements of classic fairy tales, such as the stepmother's evil intentions and the stepfather's cruelty. The use of traditional fairy tale elements brings a sense of nostalgia and simplicity to the story, which is often enjoyed by audiences of all ages.

In conclusion, the play "Cinderella" is a heartwarming tale of love and perseverance. The use of traditional fairy tale elements and the themes of family and love make it a timeless story that continues to be enjoyed by audiences today.

Rockford's track men made no bones about demonstrating their superiority at Alexander gymnasium last Friday evening. Without a doubt they were the best notators that have been seen by water fans heretofore. Even though the College-city men were definitely beaten, the route was interesting throughout the entire program. The final event was the diving by the winners brought much comment for bringing the team back next year.

The decisive victory of the Illini prospects can be partly attributed to the fact that, although the gymnastics has one of the best pools in the middle west, many swimmers refuse to go out for the sport. With, though, that bringing a few more teams similar to the one that made its appearance Thursday will be a powerful stimulus.
