FRESHMAN WEEK

In planning the period of orientation for the class of 1936, it is trusted that the administrative officers will profit by the dismal experience of this year and will abolish the upperclass council.

The evils that appeared during that week are two-fold. One weakness is to be found in the chary-ter of those individuals who construct their duties of mere advice to signify subtle "rush" talk. The second fault resides with the administrative officers who choose the staff not on a basis of ability, but recognizing that rushing would be part of the week's activities, selected the counselors that each group might be equally represented.

Are the upperclass counselors necessary?

As a new system operates at present, the upperclass endeavors to prepare a system which must be co-ordinated with thesm extracurricular activities, advise the courses of study for the fresh, and soothe those who tend to become homesick. It is believed that the freshmen would not make a great deal if they were not told off the notion of the activities' "activities" by the so-called "big shot students" during the first week. Any instrument which tends to dissociate the student from his purpose at college at such an early period is frowned upon by sound philosophy.

Following the New York Exchange

"During the past week, the market fluctuated due to bear and bull activities," declared Roger Dobblesome, Premier Laval's conference with President Hoover and the stockholders for the Conservative party in Canada. The recent election failed to cause the rising in the market which was expected.

"For the coming week I predict a cheerful outlook with a slight rise in the general market price level. The one billion dollars now available for investment, due to the interest and dividend disbursements and the maturity of bonds on Nov. 1, furnished a base for my optimism."

During the last week U. S. Steel declared a dividend of $1.30 per share. This cannot be listed as a gain because Dobblesome might sell his shares before receipt of the earnings. Mr. Dobblesome is cautiously watching the market, but, has not sold any of the stocks originally purchased.

The Reverend Burton believes that the youth of today, are the ones who will be called to solve this increasingly important problem for this crime wave. Instead of today being purely female crime— in the last decade 80 per cent of all crimes of violence were committed by youths from 15 to 25 years of age. He discussed the growing importance of the woman criminal in the United States, told how heretofore women were considered professional crook, but these days the woman criminal, fashionable in the last decade, 80 per cent of today is largely juvenile and female.
