and enforce would regard the time that rushing would begin. Under the system of the college with its freshman week, it would be necessary to postpone the start of rushing until the close of freshman week, or the opening of course proper. This could be carried out as it is now.

It is our firm conviction that there would be a decided advantage in the open rushing system in that it would compel the fraternity to display their real qualities and at the same time give the progressive pledges an opportunity to study the various Greek groups before they align themselves with a group, a thing which is hardly possible under the present plan because of the short period of rushing week.

PROGRESS IN GOVERNMENT

It was surprising and yet highly gratifying that the slate of the Student Senate nominating committee for All-College club and class offices should be accepted with very little question by students in the vote the day before yesterday with its excess of paddling and rowdyism. Practically every fraternity has been in the past.

While anyone will realize that any great change in the present system of the college with its freshman week, it would be necessary to postpone the start of rushing until the close of freshman week, or the opening of course proper. This could be carried out as it is now.

The plan adopted this year was a radical change from the cumbersome system of the past, and there was a certain amount of apprehension among students as to the feasibility of placing the power of making nominations in the hands of the Senate nominating committee. Monday’s action, however, removes all doubts about the efficiency of the governing body in this respect.

First, the action of the Senate in changing the system of nominating candidates for All-College club and class offices, and, second, the acceptance of the bill by the student body is highly indicative of a distinct trend on the campus toward greater unity and strength under the same governing body and the quickening of the interest of the student membership in the affairs of the fraternity in its own welfare and for the welfare of the fraternity situation.
