Mace Formulates Plans For Varsity April 12

Dr. Bagg is Requested to Exchange Minerals.

The Selection of the recipient is determined by a committee consisting of three members appointed by the president of the club, and the three instructors who teach the course.

Dr. Bagg Predicts Blissful Within Two Weeks

Don't send your galoshes and ski coats back home! March has come and gone, but winter isn't quite ready to go! Dr. Bagg, professor of paleontology, predicts that another snow storm will hit the Lawrence campus within the next two weeks, and states that it is already in the process of forming in the Pacific coast.

Dr. Bagg says that the blizzard which lasted from Saturday to Tuesday had its genesis in the outtermost, and that the major snow storm of the season will probably hit the Lawrence campus within the next two weeks. The blizzard is expected to last for two to three days, and will be accompanied by strong winds and heavy snow.

Dr. Bagg, who is an expert in meteorology, predicts that the snow storm will be the most severe of the season, and that the campus will be blanketed in snow for several days. He warns students to stay inside and avoid driving in the snow, and to keep their winter gear ready for the cold weather ahead.

The Lawrence University community is well-prepared for the winter weather, and the campus is stocked with supplies and equipment for the snow storm. The administration has issued a warning to students to be careful on the roads and to use caution while driving.

2. Develop a Greater Lawrence Spirit.
3. Promote Student Economy.

AND THEN SOMETHING WAS DONE

Two weeks have passed since President Wriston publicly explained that students and professors must make plans for taking that epochal step which must come before the college can approach nearer to its ultimate goals. At that time he pointed out that a necessary prerequisite to any action in a student body which is not only willing to accept responsibility but also desires to first lay the foundations for that responsibility. Through an effective student government both those fundamental attitudes can be most efficiently developed to fruition.

The tenor of the president’s audience might easily have led one to believe that an attempt to prove a definite plan would soon start or at least suggest possibilities as to possible courses of action which would arise. That any such thoughts were slightly optimistic is now evident. Fourteen days have found neither a plan developing nor a scheme brooding. The “Club” prefers to exist as is, and the student senate, as the uncles of the “Club,” has the same preferences with the possible exception that it has dared to go so far as to express a willingness to change the name by which its constituency is known provided that a better cognomen can be coined. Each student hopes that the other will offer something constructive, and such hopes never materialize.

What can be done to satisfy the wishes of those who crave action? The suggestion the Lawrenceans makes is not unique nor is it untried. It is this: have a report made solely by the students on the tutoring system.

The undertaking of such a task would not be a Herculean piece of work nor would it be the capabilities of a student government stiff in the embryonic stage. From among the 758 names in the college proper, a committee can discreetly be chosen that could effectually develop an accurate, thoughtful, precise and concrete result. Of the course, the ultimate answer is in new, and consequently many will argue that now is not the time for opinions to be published. The very nature of the system, however, calls for an organized attempt on the part of the students to make their views known in order that they may be weighed when the scheme is being discussed by the faculty and the curriculum committee.

Such a study might not be so inelastic, thorough, or comprehensive as the product of a student body that had behind it a heritage of self initiative and expression. Nevertheless it would be definite evidence concerning the potentialities of our students and their particular stage of development; it would be a marked factor in shaping the growth of a sense of responsibility.

Not A Class A Man - But Here’s Is Answer To The Proverbial Prayer

Of course this is the plain opinion of early compiler who couldn’t even approach the virtually ideal Class A mind, but his general opinion is that no one wants a Class A college man anyway. He usually is a graduate who is asked at the last minute for breakfast, a man who thought, “Hogwash,” was an allegorical play in short, an reject from the club.

So, we don’t want a Class A man, but here’s is the proverbial answer to the proverbial prayer.

He is an interesting conversationalist, and never begins by expanding his chest and saying, “What I think—”

He wears glasses, but he is not wearing his grave, even though, no matter what his latest fancies may be.

Tight Caps Make Nothing

He is able to sing or listen to a popular song without running his fingers through his hair under his collar.

He has the music of his current times with his suite and are not embarrassed with butterflies or homes.

He is not unnecessarily sophisticated but he is smooth.

He never expects on the flowers the pleasant feeling of being wanted.
