Thiesmeyer Leads Lawrence Students on Eventful Summer Geology Trip in Colorado

Lincoln R. Thiesmeyer, assistant professor of geology, is spending part of his summer in a geological summer camp near Colorado Springs. The trip is taking with him from Appleton, Philip Vert, Bill Vickers, and a new and unknown fool, the grandson of the Conservatory. Professor Thiesmeyer is assistant director, is conducted by the University of the Americas.

The students traveled to points of geological interest and were busy in the surrounding area. They saw the Spanish Peaks, Cripple Creek gold district, the Cli- nean district, in which is located the largest mine of molybdenum in the world, this ore is being used as an alloy in steel, dyes, and in the manufacture of photographic paper. cameo District, Parley's Pass, and Vickers Range.

Vickers Reach New Heights
Over the weekend, a group of the camp tradition, all the men climbed up Pike's Peak for the first time. The trail starts at an altitude of 9,100 feet and ends at 14,110 feet. The camp record for the ascent was made in 6 hours and 20 minutes. Bill Vickers, who was the first to reach the top, recorded a new record of three hours and eight minutes, a new record of the group. As evidence of this effort, he was one of the last of the group to make it back to camp.

The students were given six credits for the summer at camp. The av- erage expense was, of course, difficult to compute. A fair estimate would be about $100 to $125 for transportation money as an expense. The income made up of $50.25, and the cost of the insurance was $30,000.00, making the total cost of the summer $185,000.00. The amount of $50,000.00 was presented to the University of the Americas.

In the Limelight

Since the first selections were made in 1904, more than 1,000 students have become Rhodes scholars. Some of the famous Rhodes scholars include: T. S. Eliot, a poet and philosopher, and who was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1963; John F. Kennedy, who served as the 35th president of the United States; and Winston Churchill, who served as Prime Minister of the United Kingdom during the Second World War.

The first president of the American Rhodes Association was James Wilson, a signatory of the Declaration of Independence. Since that time the annual concert tour has been provided by the students of the University of the Americas.

No one of the students at the University of the Americas was on the list. This is due to the fact that all the students were only enrolled in the university for the last year of their undergraduate studies.
