Most People Do Not Know How to See, Play, Clay

Should Be Read With Emotions, Not Brain

"Plans should be read with the emotions and not with the brain," said F. Theodore Cloak, director of the Lawrence college theater, speaking at a convention on Friday, November 18.

Mr. Cloak said of his work during the past two years, studying at Yale University, where he has been doing research work in the medieval theater. During his studies, he attempted to see, to play, and to clay in the way a playwright, an actor, and a director would do it.

His studies have led him to believe that there are certain basic emotions that are universal and that can be experienced by anyone regardless of their cultural background.

Cloak also emphasized the importance of understanding the emotions behind a work of art, rather than just analyzing its technical aspects.

"In a play," said Cloak, "the emotions are often more powerful than the words. If you understand the emotions, you can better understand the play itself."

Cloak's research has been published in a book titled "The Emotions of the Stage." It is available in the university bookstore.
Time Out for a Little Necking—but a Turkey Is the Fortunate Fowl

THREE HUNDRED GIGGLES AGO, our Pilgrim forefathers, sat down to their First Thanksgiving. They were a lot younger than we are, but we were no less in need of the break. In fact, the story books say that they went to church, ate turkey, and spent the rest of the night dancing. While Lawrentians were thankful for the orchestra, a coke bar, and a near holiday with no classes. It is to be feared, however, that the description pilgrims would have raised their eyes, and mores, and note, if they had seen their nineteen-thirty-eight followers carrying on with such exuberance. But we suspect that the venerable William Bradford himself would not have been adverse to tripping the light fantastic if he had been favored with the impromptu combination of the Standards, a Lawrence co-ed, and a gush-light spotlight.

The Alpha Chi's on Sunday, the Beta's on Monday, and the Delta's on Tuesday. The committee members were thanked for the orchestra, a coke bar, and a near holiday with no classes. Mission House to Invade Lawrence for First Game

Five Regulars Make Up Mission House to roach of Viking cagers, a radical change was essential to adopt a style of play to suit the present squad. With a squad consisting of members of comparatively small stature, Coach Denney has altered the attack to invoke a faster and less set attack than in previous years. In the past few years plays

... Statutes. Coach Denney has altered three other non-conference teams.

In the future, the squad and one from the season before will comprise the framework for the team which will encounter nothing opposed.

The squad is being built around four freshmen from last year's squad. The forward position appears to be the weakest and least fortified in reserve. Both Jackson and Casper are rather frail in build, and Denney's first concerns is with his front line. Charles Schaefer and Jack Bernard, both of Barre, have demonstrated their ability to absorb bouncing around and "Take it", but they are rather inexperienced. These three men are working in at forward. They are Ed Bajerly, Appleton, Craig Hink, Wauwatosa, and Albert Novakoff, Menasha.

The previous mentioned starting line up is only tentative, and it is probable that there will be considerable shifting of positions during

Clear Claim to Big Ten Honors

Michigan, Purdue Finish In Ties for Second Place

The Golden Gophers of Minne- sota still wear the western confer- ence championship crown won in 1931 and never since worn by anyone except Minnesota in the eleven years.

During the "jitterbug" conference race, both Michigan and Pa- perto Finish in its comeback under Coach Hartley. Minnesota might snatch away the cham- pionship if it wins both its remaining games. The Golden Gophers are tied with both Northwestern and Wisconsin at 6-2-2 and hold the edge of the tie by defeating the Wildcats, 22-17.

Northwestern defeated Wisconsin, 21-6, in the final game of the conference's closing bracket.

Michigan, defeated only by Minne- sota in its come-back under Coach Fritz Crisler, tied the second place with Purdue. Each won three games, and the West made five losses, all to the Golden Gophers. Northwestern and Wisconsin tied, both winning four and losing five.

A small group of Northwestern fans and some students of the Golden Gophers, known as "the Mohicans," attended the Northwestern-Wisconsin game. When the final score was announced, they were jubilant. "We're going to claim the Big Ten this year! The Golden Gophers, under Coach Hartley, won't catch us!"

The Golden Gophers' football team is expected to finish second in the conference.
