Semester Examinations Are Tests for Registrar As Well as Students

By Hester Wolfe

Claimed them to add 2 + 2. Then began a problem just for you.

"Oh, you mean it's all done now?"

"Not exactly. Only the group problems are complete. Then we may figure out the section arranging."

"Your office has two college instructors and Margaret Tonnessen, who types out the necessary forms."

She went on to explain that the exam is a two-day job, as she must have cards on her desk for all of the exams from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. The exam problems are based on those written last month.

At any rate, after a week of grading, all students fall into a state of apathy. Emotional mathematics thereafter, then waiting, careful to be scientifically filled.

Execs

Requirements for Photo Exhibit are Revealed by Dite

Entries for the Lawrence college photo exhibit must be submitted to James F. Dite by Friday, February 4. The judging of requirements for entries Dite stated that there is no minimum size, material standards, or that pictures may be toned or tinted. All prints are to be measured in inches or the number of days per square inch. The judge may print on any blend; that is to be said that the sound can be within very few. A limit of four photos per exhibitor has been set. This number may be distributed among the judges. Each exhibit must be submitted only at the times mentioned above.

Use GI Benefits

For International Living Experience

Information has been received regarding the distribution of GI benefits that will help pay the costs taking part in the summer abroad. The International Living Experience is a program in which students spend the summer months abroad. Approximate classes in the country are living with a family in the country visit. The remainder of the summer is devoted to camping, traveling, etc. The cost of the program varies from $500 to $600 depending upon the country. This program is open to those who took part in the program.

All applications must be in the office before January 31.

Snow Strands Two Vikings In Wyoming

Some people have all the luck! The snow is always whiter in the upper fellow's state—just ask Marion Zender and Bob Dawley, who were stranded at the little town of Green River, Wyoming, for seven days, hit the plains states last week, seven trains with a total of 1500 passengers were snowed in, many sleeping on luggage racks in the emptiness. Sporadically planned activities kept everyone busy. A basketball game was held between the Wyoming and Hamline teams who were among those caught by the blizzard. A dance was held in the local school. Cards, the local theater, and some mountain biking were other activities. Forty silver pennies, "most of the passengers were fellow students, and they all had a good time," said Bob. Students from Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Brown, Smith, Stevens and other colleges were among those stranded by the snow, which was 20 to 50 feet deep in some. All were snowed in, those out of the nearest bus stop were snowed in at the little town of about 2000 people.

Coeds Give Time, Effort as Neenah Hospital Apprentices

It is about time to clear up the incident which occurred recently at the hospital when a patient suddenly fainted in the emergency room. A few women were seen dawdly leaving the room on their way down to get the bus to Neenah, although none of the attendants had anything to do with the incident. They be glad to give up the coop if they stopped anything long enough to inquire: they are on their way to the THEDA Clark hospital to put in their four hours. They are trying to make a point for the women who worked there. They figure on the cutlery volunteer for uniform.

Jean Wicke is in charge of the group, which is the Community Service Commission of S.C.A. It is organized so that each girl gets a week and there are three girls who go dally from here. They help patients, take them their meals, perform water, straighten the bedside trays, and check out visitors' cards and delivering newspapers and flowers to the patients.

The hospital gives them their answer servant in the cafeteria with news and other hospital help. Not only is it good work but often it is worthwhile work. But often experiences come up which are making the rounds of the room.

Upon seeing her "man said, "that's a pretty one." She thought, "Oh, a pretty patient!" but discovered that was no good experience working in a hospital. When the community is all and,dividualism unfortunately has over-taken the individual nothing, a reaction stepped ito bounds. If in the case of the individual to the right of the world, he must rely on himself and must "it look neither an authoritar-

To convince the man that had been before the patient, "who is this your girl?" he said and that he be wanted to know who she was anyway.

"Whether he ever found out alone doesn't matter," was the patient's name the next week at an interview with someone else. "It's something only she can tell you." She didn't know, as he said, she was to call him up and tell him who a girl always, but he said that she had to be sure that he be wanted to know who she was anyway.

Jean Els had a little trouble to convince the latest teeny after whom they put their meals. They are not the only people that work in every room, and the patients waited patiently. Even so she clumsily tried instructing how to supply them water in every way until she knew that the three young ladies had also attended.

Only Pierschel was on duty when someone died. She went to the first aid room at the usual moment with a fan, which is the thing most in place, as she quoted, "Well, another one—take it easy." A furrow of death was on her face.

Mary Ann Whitaker and Louis Larsson had a hard time getting up to the hospital. It turned out to be his own mg of whiskey! when she offered a drink of water. He hesitated a moment and then muttered, "I'm sorry," when she went up under the bed. But if the pot, it will back rather tany. He is now-just a while white, below here try it!

Lack of information is responsible for more unnecessary mistakes, ill-founded complaints and wrong decisions of the student government and administration that the student body can think. An example came to our attention this week in looking through the minutes of the meetings of the Main hall staff.

Executive committee members investigated last semester's possibilities of school and keeping the steps from becoming slippery. Following the first snowfall last fall, steps were installed and sidewalks were shoveled. The possibility of trends was avoided upon realization that ice would form on them just as well as on the bare wood. This week Mr. Watts issued an order to keep the steps free from ice by the prompt application of which the students can think.

The point is that had the Lawrentian known the mother had been investigated, or when he had not been informed, the subject would not have been raised again, and the duplicate inquiry, as well as the duplicating inquiry, would have been avoided. This executive committee should have got the credit and the Lawrentian should have got the information.

An improvement in executive committee public relations seems to be in order.

Quotations of the Week

Tom Dietrich's show in Sag has gone a great success. The Lawrentian believes that he is to be commended for what he has done while here, and pleased that the event was evident to him at the exhibition Friday, November 26th. The Art association is to be commended for its responsibility in making arrangements, and hopes that it will continue to make such similar opportunities available to Lawrentians and townsmen.

Outside

BY CURRER

This week we promised to deliver to the students that almost mythical new pal of a drama student. We have finally decided that this column will serve to add a little interest to the letter of the Lawrentian.

We have not approached any of the drama or any other illuminating activity on the campus with as much serenity as we are about to dismiss with the following words.

Dr. Crafton and Miss Neids have answered a few questions here and there about the drama festival that was announced.

This has been almost entirely an affair of students among the students that the new drama was trying to attract that a few questions here and there concerning the festival had been answered.

However, habit makes a good friend, and a poor enemy. We feel that students should show that they have a fire in their hearts and that students are only part of the picture, and we would like to develop a social conscience in the students. The student government council is working on a few matters that they should take action on as much as they do anything else.

The Lawrentian also believes that it is wonderful news that those students who are interested here should appear at the various meetings, and in their interests, and in the interest of the students.

As we have already noted, drama and the theatre have been popularized by providing half of their technical equipment with the art department. Those students who are interested in the theatre should stand up and say that they will attend community theatre and other dramatic shows.

We feel that students who are interested in the theatre should attend community theatre and other dramatic shows.
