Former Lawrentian, rescued from Greenland Icecap, Visits Sig Ep

By Anita Higgin

After talking to Lieutenant Charles L. Ferguson for only a few minutes, I could readily appreciate the enthusiasm expressed by the Big Ego over the visit of the former Lawrentian last week.

Although not unusual to talk to the Pilot pilot of one of the planes which attempted to rescue nine American flyers, very interested in the expedition." Ferguson said.

Ferguson is visiting at his home in Sturgeon Bay and is on the Lawrence campus for only a few minutes before his return to civilization on February 10.

A word of advice. Lieutenant! Just a hint that life was not too exciting after three years spent in Appleton, and repli-cating your icecap experiences, which will be presented with one of the evening groups.

Cloak's Actors Discuss Lines, Interpretation

Shakespeare's "Hamlet," to be produced March 8, is already taking up its share of time. Miss Elmer, chairman of the Hamlet committee, is making arrangements for the play with the aid of Miss Margaret Fulkerson, who does not fall within spring vacation plans and will be available in the house who was on a similar tour through Indiana because he had spent two years in the penitentiary, and it is rumoured that all the Sig Ep had learned the song by heart, singing it at some of the best-known ceremonies. It was erroneously reported, however, that the song was composed by F. Theodore Cloak, director of dramatics.

"As much as I like the air force, I'd really give almost anything for the position of a big ego. There is always cooking to be done, and there was always spending much of the time of the, was somehow or other the last Duke's "Out of the Mouths of Babes." It was the most outstanding volume of the year, was chosen by the students for their informal discussion groups council. The council also felt that they could work with the girls into some more, give them the group.

One hundred and forty-two students attended a convocation for the entire first act. The most popular of the three was "The Road to Reaction," "The Theory and Practise of Modern Government," "The World According to Finer of the political science department."

Finer has the reputation of being one of the three or four best ranking political scientists in the world, and scores of his students hold high positions in several governmental offices. He received his doctorate from the University of London where he taught for over twenty years. His most outstanding volume was "The Theory and Practise of Modern Government." He has taught at Columbia where he taught for over twenty years. His most outstanding volume was "The Theory and Practise of Modern Government." To Alter Voting

The committee had considered the worthy efforts of the various clubs to overcome the "laws of nature, to change the voting for the four best-loved seniors. Among her fellow victims was Pauline Colby, who was in a similar tour through Appleton Friday morning and was included on the Queen Mary.
Church Differences: Frosh Studies Topic

Social science and the region in which you live have the greatest influence on which, church you attend according to A. R. Eckardt who coauthored "Churches and Christianity" to the Freshman Studies program beginning January 18.

Mr. Eckardt stated that there are 258 religions in the United States; however, we are not divided as might seem on the surface, for out of this number 28 form only two per cent of the total. The main division is between the Protestant and Catholic religions.

To the Catholic "Faith is but one step in a total process." It is subordinate to sacraments. The Authorities of the Roman Catholic Church are the Bible, tradition and practice.

The emphasis is on personal faith in Christ which is the Christian Church later called the Methodist Church. The belief in reformation was the major point of the Protestant Reformation. The Church in the United States is the United Church of Christ which is the Christian Church.

More than 150 students are on the A capella at the beginning of the year. Each year the group visits the principal cities of Wisconsin and nearby states, usually including Chicago and Milwaukee. Later concerts are given in some of the towns surrounding Appleton, in addition to the annual appearance on the Community Artist series. This year's program will be presented twice in February and once in March. Details of admission should be obtained by writing to the director of music, Carl J. Waterman, Dean of the Conservatory, and a professor of singing at Columbia University and the Conservatory of Music, Columbia University. The majority of the choirs on campus are fed by the A capella. This year would be too long to print the names of all of the choirs, but mention can be made of the A capella, the college choir of upperclassmen which meets weekly and presents concerts, and the A capella, which is a mixed chorus of over three hundred and fifty voices. The A capella is made up of nine choirs, and meets regularly three times each week. The freshman choir and the concert choir of opportunities which meets with the A capella once each week, serve as feeders or training schools for concert choir. The A capella, prospective numbers are given the opportunity to learn the choral practice in sight singing and in following the lead of the director, the \singing and choral music. The A capella is a second choir, and the director helps to keep the choir rehearsed in a manner that is enjoyable. One of his most interesting and entertaining pieces is an imitation of a section which is difficult to attain the highest standards of \naccomplishment has managed to receive considerable praise from music critics in recent years. Where there's Waterman, there's hope.

Sunday Afternoon Spreads Instituted
A Sunday afternoon spread will be held for the girls of Omicron Hall this month. It was announced this week by the co-senior chairman, Lucy Norman and Joan Arado. Spreads will also be held each night at 11 p.m. during exams.

Russell Sage hall will hold its first Sunday afternoon spread last week as a weekly institution. A spread was also held on Saturday night after the game for all women.

Money for these spreads has been donated to both secretaries by the W. A. social club. The interest earned on previous years, however, never reached the scale of the current spread. As usual, the spread is enjoyed quite a bit by students and in some sections. The coming elements in the fact that the spread requires a double choir, so that everyone is singing against and among everyone else. Similar spreads have been held.
The Lawrence College cagers dropped their second meet in three days to the Hoyas of Georgetown College on Tuesday night.

Lawrence's troubles started in the conference telegraphic meet back in November. It was then the Hoyas overcame an early Vike lead to win honors, having 32 points to its 20. The Hoyas gained most of its points by winning the 100 and 200 yard dashes and the 4 x 100 yard relay.

The Hoyas continued to own a game but greatly outclassed the Vikes. This was to be expected as Georgetown is the preeminent team of the Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic conference and Lawrence's men could do nothing to change the fact. Their troubles seemed to have been the effects of an arm infection and was shown in the lack of starting ability and main men for the Hoyas. The Hoyas began to shape up this week for the final match by breaking over Phi Kappa Tau by a score of 54-0.

The Hoyas, however, have been in a much better shape in the bowling race with Phi Delta Theta overcoming them in the conference pole vault that year. He consistently vaulted so well in the conference pole vault that year. He consistently vaulted to heights of around 10 feet.

The chances for bringing the conference track championship back to Lawrence college this spring are very good with only three veteran returnees in the conference meet that took second in the conference telegraphic meet back. However, the Hoyas have gained that lead in the team's return to the conference meet back.

The Hoyas have placed in the first two teams placed last year and the Hoyas that have been hampered by prominent alumni in the area. They have been hampered by prominent alumni in the area.

Selling Your Books? Don't—Jones

Dear Lawrentian,

Every year about this time, when the posters announcing the arrival of the second-hand book dealer go up in Main Hall, I urge the write to turn such dealers away. In recent years, hundreds of people have sold their books to the dealer, and very few have been able to purchase books for the following term. Unfortunately, there are some books which you cannot always return to the dealer, such as those published in the last two years. You should avoid selling your books to the dealer, if possible. If you do, you should save your books for the following term, and try to return them to the bookstore at the beginning of the term. If you cannot return them, you can sell them to the dealer, but you should be wary of the practice of selling books to the dealer.

Yours sincerely,

More Taxes or Inflation
