Lawrence Music Graduate Featured in Melchior Show

Miss Shirlee Emmons, a 1944 graduate of the conservatory of music, will return to Appleton as a professional singer and featured attraction with the Lauritz Melchior show on May 3 at 8:30 p.m.

Miss Emmons appears with the show as a result of winning the competition last fall for an important role in the Melchior opera, "Barber of Seville." She sang in major roles like Butterfly's Miss Cio-Cio-San, as well as smaller items. Several years ago she was a Pupil scholarship student at the conservatory, and last year, she was part of the chorus for the National Music League competition.

In the last year, she has won two major music awards. The first was a competition by the National Music League, an organization which sponsors young artists until they have a national reputation. The second was a 20,000 Marian Anderson award for her musical study and performances.

At Lawrence, Miss Emmons was particularly singled out for her voice and showmanship.

Results of University's Recent Teacher Evaluation Announced

Editor's Note: The following article is reprinted from the newspaper of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio and concerns the results from a recent "Pupil Evaluation of Teaching" which was conducted at the university. A similar evaluation plan will be carried out at Lawrence during the month of May.

General approval of the "Pupil Evaluation of Teaching" plan at Western Reserve University has been registered by a majority of the faculty who were evaluated by the program. The evaluation, known as "PET" to faculty and students alike, has been under way for the past two years. A faculty-student committee is working on the project this year.

Thirty-four professors originally had been rated by their classes; the results showed that nearly three-quarters thought that PET was valuable and 68 percent of them planned that the present plan should be continued.

The questionnaire asked whether or not the teachers had made any change in teaching methods because of the student ratings. Over 60 percent reported that they had made some changes but did not specify just what those changes were.

Several questions dealt with matters of policy. One of these asked whether student ratings of teachers should be acted on by the faculty. Sixty-seven per cent answered "yes," while most of the remainder felt that faculty action would be needed only for miscellaneous problems.

The questionnaire also included items like the following:

"Nothing further can be done about the atmosphere of a class because of the student ratings."
"There is no evidence that the outcome of the evaluations has been used in a way that is unfair to the teachers or the students."
"The students do not seem to be critical enough in their evaluations."
"The students are generally making a favorable impression."

Another general conclusion was that all the teachers were judged to be enthusiastic about the subject matter and to possess a breadth of background knowledge. Most of them have been frequently accused of knowing little outside the text-book, and some was described as unjustly prejudiced against or in favor of certain students.

These findings showed the students do not use PET as an outlet for the expression of resentment, and a few members of the faculty have even suggested that the students are not critical enough.

Constitution Drawn Up
At Student Conference

One of the main actions taken by this year's Mid-West conference of student body governments was to draw up a constitution for the conference. Constitution plans were submitted by Knox and St. Olaf. The Constitution committee used parts of each of these with modifications.

The biggest problem in drawing up this constitution involved the membership in the Mid-West conference. The actual question was Should Beloit be admitted as a member? Beloit was represented at the conference.

The problem of whether the athletic conference and the student body government conferences are independent of each other was discussed and it was decided by the group that these conferences are independent and that each school represented was in favor of the admission of Beloit to the Mid-West conference.

Beloit, being similar to the other schools in the conference, was much more to concern themselves with. By the time they met in the spring, they had reached a climax with the admission of Beloit to the conference upon ratification of the conference.

The Constitution committee used parts of each of these with modifications in the Mid-West conference.

fall of his sophomore years he took fourth place in the conference cross-country race, and as a junior he was second in the state AAI competition with a time of 4:28.6.

Win had never drawn a cartoon until his freshman year, when he was coaxed up to Lawrence by a professor to furnish a weekly picture. It was this impetus that turned him into a book.

One of his track cartoons shows a coach with a fey winged figure in tow—undisputably Mercury—screaming at his runners, "You're not trying. Forget it!"

During the low-and-arrow door bashing season Win drew a sketch of a gentleman labeled "G. W. W. Anderson," hunting against a tree, an arrow quivering in his chest. Mr. Hunter looking for a bow and arrow is rushing up, exclaiming, "Couldn't quite see what it was, Ed, but I think you got it." Win is secretary of the letterman's club, and vice-president of his fraternity, Phi Kappa Tau. He is also the proud owner of one of the campus's most unique pet rocks, Tutu, a scientifically treated chunk, which has been broken of his anti-social mannerism.

Dutch Visitor To Lawrence

Is Book Subject

Raymond F. Keller, the father of two, Harold, Lawrence, and a laboratory assistant at Science hall, has recently come to public attention for the authorship of a book titled "Cinderella with the Wooden Slipper." Mr. Keller is a laboratory assistant at Science hall, and has worked for the United States Rubber company, New York city, and has been brought to Lawrence from Berlin as a young Dutch girl to American after the war. The book is a record of her "Discovery of America." A visit to Appleton and Lawrence college were among her American experiences.

The Keller's became interested in Maria de Vos when they discovered a letter she had written in a national magazine. Their friendship developed by correspondence, and eventually she was brought to the States. The reactions of the Dutch girl, her ambitions and her gratitude, are all related in Mr. Keller's book. Numerous quotes from her diary add a flavor of their own as she occasionally mixes her English adjectives and adverbs.

Mr. Keller comes from Upper Manhattan, Ohio, but now lives in Stamford, Conn. He refuses to call himself an author, and insists that this is his first and probably last book. Mrs. Keller, once a stenographer, typed and edited the manuscript.

He became an Assistant Cashier in 1940, and a Second Vice President in 1946. He is 34 years with the bank and is a member of the Illinois Bar. students sound on - discriminatory clauses

Dear Editor,

Monday night the upper-class women were assembled at a compulsory hearing at 8 p.m. This meeting concerned the "do's" and "don'ts" of Lawrence. We were told that for a successful system of government, all aspects of Lawrence must have some affirmative action towards rules which are most desirable. After the discussion of "do's," we were informed of the following "don'ts":

1. Do not wear the horns and cap which a Lawrence woman enjoys selecting by herself, etc.;
2. Do not advertise in the student government.

We were informed that the rules which go with this effect are not made by the Lawrence women, but by the Lawrence men, who have been asked to make these rules. We have had no direct means of delaying the opinions concerning the rules by which we live. It is this self-government which makes me believe that a questionnaire should be sent to each girl, presenting them as a solution to an effective self-government.

George Warner, associate director of women's activities at Colorado University, says "American say!"

As for policies which limit the student body, there are many students who are looking forward to the repeal of the women's rule. Above all we must support our principles.

Yours sincerely,

Editor.

The immediate purpose of the student government is to provide an adequate seating arrangement so that everyone may see and hear. By providing practical education, it means being better prepared for the future. It is our duty to provide an adequate seating arrangement.

The Roosevelt College Torch, Chicago, is unhappy over campus enrollment statistics. Roosevelt College has dropped in enrollment from the "twelfth or tenth consecutive semester."

This is the Torch, in the past December, in its "last and most conser- vative statistics" that has been established.

The poll was taken December 20 and represents a hike of increased interest in the college which has been hard to overcome.

Faculty, students and friends have been extremely divided on the question, while the students in the North, too, are anxiously awaiting discrimination clauses. Here's the breakdown:

North

South

Most college students are against it. No opinion

7 per cent

3 per cent

Other do's and don'ts

Other would have it no other way says a student from the University of the South, Tenn., referring to all-white fraternities.

A freshman at the University of Minnesota calls it a "lack of brains. " Wish I felt differently," said this student, "if I had training to be a nurse."

Students who are against the dis- crimination clauses are found to be divided.

YESTERDAY afternoon we discussed the high and low points of student government at its meeting on the campus. We consider this meeting to be a success and we wish the students to be included in the next meeting.

The student government has been asked to refrain from making unreasoned, emotional protests. They are trying to be a part of the student government, but are not succeeding. They are trying to be a part of the student government, but are not succeeding.

It was also brought to our attention that student government must re-usable the use of the money, it pro- vides effectively to the rest of the people. For the proper arrangements, the student government have set aside the use of the learning process. This is what we have been doing since the last meeting and we understand the objectives involved.

The immediate purpose of the student government is to provide an adequate seating arrangement so that everyone may see and hear. By providing practical education, it means being better prepared for the future. It is our duty to provide an adequate seating arrangement.

Yours sincerely,

Editor.
