Codic Discusses Revised SEC Constitution in Convo

SEAN LEE

This is the preamble to the new constitution of the Lawrence College Student Government, approved by the Student Executive Council on December 12, 1960.

The purpose of this meeting today is twofold. First, I wish to discuss that portion of the new constitution in student government that ensures the participation of students in their own government. Second, I wish to discuss with you some proposals for the new constitution of Lawrence College student government.

However, before we approach these two topics, there are several fundamental points which must be made. What is student government? How does it differ from a conventional corporation? However, student government is a byproduct of the social life on the college campus. Moreover, it is the communication of the problems and needs of the students in a way that the administration and faculty cannot possibly understand. The SEC enjoys this traditional role, that is, the student government in its natural state. Now, the question remains, do we accomplish the goals we establish for ourselves? And, what is the best way to achieve these goals? Our answer is NO! We accomplish these goals in a small part of the organization, and only for our own personal interest. Lawrence College student government is really much more than this brief description. Student government is the only organization into which every student paid money in college. This year the SEC could be organized in a better way. We might give, but no real excuses for the SEC as a whole. We have written a document which we believe is a true representation of the needs and desires of the Student Body. It is a true representation of the SEC for the past ten years. I want you to believe that it is also best for the SEC in the past ten years. It is based on the idea that it was the only organization which its officers were all-student elected; and for which all students would be entitled, The Student Body will serve as the chairman of the SEC. The SEC constitution, which is in a new organization, frequently breaks down in the representation. The SEC, the main committee organizing the entire organization.

The second principle centered on a conflict of interest created by the unbalanced system. We should be able to avoid this conflict of interest. Furthermore, the SEC, by itself, is a better organization.

In our deliberations, we concluded that much of the good changes in the SEC could be a result of a centralized cooperation. The Student Body will serve as the chairman of the SEC.

In our deliberations, we concluded that much of the good changes in the SEC could be a result of a centralized cooperation. This year, we moved the SEC from one office to another. It was difficult to control the SEC. Now, we have a new constitution which we believe is a true representation of the SEC for the past ten years.
Professor Beck Publishes New Critique on Faulkner

Professor Beck's studies in Faulkner began twenty years ago when he published a series of essays on Faulkner's point of view, his relation to the South, and his style. These essays, among the earliest critical texts to appear in print, have since been reprinted in anthologies of Faulkner's short stories.

Beck began work on his critical study of the trilogy during a summer's leave of absence from Lawrence in 1959 and continued it last summer. A portion of the work appeared in the Spring issue of the Virginia Quarterly Review.

The book contains Professor Beck's studies in Faulkner's work and is published by the University of Wisconsin Press in October. The author of three novels and three collections of short stories, Professor Beck has turned to literary criticism for his seventh major work. The book is a study of the themes, patterns, and art of Faulkner's Snopes trilogy.

Schneider Lectures On African Sojourn

Mr. Harold Schneider, Lawrence professor of anthropology, gave a lecture Wednesday evening, February 8 in Harper Hall consisting of informative and commentary on his recent trip to Tanganyika. His trip was supported by the National Science Foundation, which is in turn supported by the Federal government. The lecture was a study of the contemporary life and customs of a group of people living in Tanganyika in East Africa.

The aims of Professor Schneider's trip were to find out the ways in which the Tutsi live, their economic and cultural structure in general and the economic and culture of five-echo on them; the family and family relationships; and the many tribal ceremonies and rites.

Questions following Professor Schneider's talk provided more information both on his trip and Tanganyika and its problems. These essays, among the principal changes, give us hope that our government can be responsible for the part of education which takes place outside the classroom, along with the traditional role of student service.

Speeches Pass Articles

Last Monday night's BSC meeting secured the passage of Articles V and VI of the Student Government Constitution. With these articles passed, the by-laws are the next item slated for passage.

During the meeting, it was announced that Student Emergency petitions would come out on February 13. A special committee was also assigned to look into the matter of business for the purpose of the trainings of returning students.

When Gene Bernier received his degree in Business Administration at the University of Michigan in 1957, he had top offers from several businesses.

Gone chose Michigan Bell Telephone Company because: “This job was tough to get. There was no doubt in my mind that I was being carefully evaluated for a responsible management job. Just getting this job was a challenge.”

One of Gene’s early assignments was writing a training manual for new employees which would explain telephone accounting in simple everyday terms—a tough job even for a seasoned writer.
But Gene did it. And his next step was a natural.

In November, 1958, he was transferred to the Michigan Bell Economic Studies Section as editor of a monthly publication, “Michigan Business Trends.” In this work, Gene analyzes and reports business trends in Michigan as an aid to telephone management people in decision making.

Gene proved his skill in reducing complex economics problems to simple terms. And, sixteen months after his transfer he was promoted to Senior Statistician.

Today, Gene sums it up this way: “The idea around here is to get the best a man has in him.
To me that spells opportunity.”

If you want a job where you will get real responsibility and have a chance to move ahead as fast as your ability will take you—then you want to find out more about the Bell Companies. Your Placement Office has literature and additional information.

“Our number one aim is to have in all management jobs the most vital, integrate, positive and imaginative men we can possibly find.”

American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

from the editors’ desk . . .

At the beginning of the second semester it is customary for the new editor to state in general terms the policy to which the paper will adhere during her tenure in office. So—here goes.

It will be the goal of the Lawrentian to serve Lawrence students not only as a mirror of campus life, although this will certainly continue to be an important part of the paper’s function, but also as some sort of guide to where this campus stands in relation to its environment. By this, I mean that a college must become aware of the world which it functions, and it is part of a campus newspaper’s job to assist in building this awareness with the student body.

Perhaps awareness is the key word here—awareness of events which although they exist outside of the college itself should still be vital interest to students. We will attempt to implement this policy in two areas: feature stories concerned with these aspects of student affairs of more than local interest, and news stories about local and national events which relate to students.

We hope that such articles will add the student in realizing his place and the place of the college in relation to the world around him. Such an awareness is a necessary part of education, and the Lawrentian will do its best to fulfill its obligations in this area. Any suggestions for articles of this nature are welcomed by the editorial staff.
