President Calls Committee To Settle Dorm Controversy

Liberal Male Caller Rule Results in Major Dispute

LAWRENCE'S new president, Dr. Curtis W. Tarr, continued his investigation of campus social institutions this week as he called for a "bargaining committee" to settle differences between himself and the newly instituted women's dormitories in North house.

The move follows last week's announcement that Tarr will look into the school institutional open house policy. The president also said he will examine the men's dorms presently the first floor of Trever hall in the near future.

Main controversy of the dispute over roles at the women's homes dorms is the liberal regulation of 'gentleman callers.' The proposed set up by the dorms residents would allow visitors anytime during women's regular hours except in the morning.

The bargaining committee to negotiate this question is scheduled to meet sometime next week. It will be composed of President Tarr, Miss Mary Morton, dean of women; and three to five girls from the home section.

Tarr said the proposal represented a large number of hours when there's no privacy in the dorm.

Wisconsin Beer Law Revisions

The Practical Interpretation of the Twelve-revised Beer and Alcoholic Beverages Law, which has not yet been analyzed by the Wisconsin attorney general, according to dean of law Dr. William M. Schutte, professor of English, is co-author of a chapter in a recently revised edition of Supervisors' Guide." This law is so new that all the involved aspects have not been considered," Venderbush said.

In short, the law now states that no one under the age of 21 may consume or be in possession of beer away from a licensed vendor unless he is accompanied by a parent, guardian or chauffeur who is over age 21. A chauffeur is defined as "a responsible adult who is present to insure propriety at a gathering of young persons."

If a youth is not accompanied by anyone over 25 years of age, he must consume the beer within 10 feet of the place of purchase.

Garth and Freeh, city attorneys of Appleton, and Venderbush, believe this law will have no great affect on student life here at Lawrence College.

"However," Freehlich noted, "it will, of course, directly affect the college students here."

Freehlich also explained, "The authorities in Appleton will enforce this law as well as they can. As far as I know, they have not had much trouble with violators. A violation of this law may bring a sentence up to 30 days in jail, a $50-500 fine or both."

Venderbush said, "I feel that this contains a certain advantage over the old law, for it points the responsibility on a certain individual. This meets some of the problems of the past."

"It is the same principle of responsibility which was written into the Lawrence drinking age rules when it was changed in 1902. But I do not feel that this will change substantially the student social life here at Lawrence college."

International Student Cites 'Stronger Friendships' Here

By HOPE HARRON

"THE LIFE of a student in the United States is more withdrawn and self-contained on the campus as compared to life at a European university," said Georges Friese, an international student from Germany.

"THE EUROPEAN student is not confined to a campus but he leads the life of a citizen. American college life is a life of its own. This fact," he said, "helps to develop a stronger friendship among students and closer contacts with professors."

Georges has come to Lawrence to study the American way of life. Besides his contacts with students, courses in American history, American literature, public speaking and government will further his understanding of the American culture.

Originally from Belgium, Georges has been living in Germany during the past eight years. He was encouraged to study at Lawrence by Camille Joseph Schmidt, an English teacher at Belgium high school who also spent a year at Lawrence as a lecturer in French.

THE THREE-TERM plan is new to Georges at the University of Brussels, where he hopes to attend after leaving the United States, the subject load is heavier. Each student is required to complete a core of courses before beginning his field of study.

Comparing the American college with the European equivalent, Georges has observed that Lawrence students have more influence in planning activities and voicing ideas than those in Belgium or in Germany. He has also noticed that students here seem to be proud of their school. In Belgium there is an acute problem of overcrowding in universities. Institutions are not prepared for the 13,000 students who seek higher education.

Because of the scarcity of universities to accommodate so many students, study becomes highly individualized and personal, without having the advantages of small classes and close contact with professors. "Each student has to resolve his own study habits and develop a mature mind," he said.

UNIVERSITIES in Belgium are state supported, leading toward the awarding of a legal diploma. The government defines what will be taught. This is the cause of attempts by scholars to bring about a more liberal policy.

When asked about the European impression of the American student, Georges replied, "European visualizes Americans sitting with two legs on a table, chewing bubble gum. This comes," he said, "from the impression that Americans are materialistic and selfish in ideas."

Students in the United States exported in Europe. After living in a college community, I disagree," he said. "Georges is a teaching assistant in the French department and hopes to start a conversation club. He plans to travel through the United States after his work at Lawrence."

This play, in which Mayer is assisted by Mary Anne Swanson as Addiction, began rehearsals last Monday night with a cast of upperclassmen.

"This is a major play in the repertoire of English comedy," he said. "It is a challenging play since it offers the wit and devil take the hindmost spirit of Restoration theatre, yet looks forward to the sentimental comedy that is typical of the eighteenth century," said Mayer.

"Our twentieth century notion of love dates from this period," he continued, "and this play, as much as any other dramatic document, states the conflict between sentiment and sex that still plagues undergraduates."

Cast in leading roles are Julie Bigger as Mrs. Sedley; Maria Miller as Dorinda; Tom Brown as Allonby; and Jack Swanson as Archer.

The cast are Mike Ward, Count Belvedere; Sandy Ford, Freedman; Fritz Fett, Fagard; Chuck Bamberson, Gentleman; George Putz, Charming; Gay Easton, Bag shot; Phil Kastiloff, Bagman; Tim Kantz, St. Luke; Sue Campbell, Lady Beautiful; Lady John Gaynor; and Amy Cooper, Countess.

Faculty Unconcerned With "Study Problem"

"THIS POLICY is an indication of somebody scratching at a very big itch for which there is no medicine," quipped Dr. Maurice P. Canningham, head of the Lawrentian classics department. He was referring to the two-horned dilemma of privacy vs. open dorms. He said further that "the one great drawback to this college as a whole is the lack of student privacy."

TO GET some idea of faculty opinion on the open dorm policy, the Lawrentian interviewed 11 faculty members. Of those, eight were for the system, three against it.

It is interesting to note that the faculty members interviewed did not express concern about strong likelihood of the policy's affecting society; generally, there was no strong opposition to the plan.

Dr. Canningham feels that "practically as one on the faculty knows how the system operates, for it was never subject to faculty action."

The major problem with the system, he said, is that the dormitories are not designed for an open-dorm setup.

He sensed the serious lack of student privacy, adding that "because students are deprived of weekly, only what is within walking distance is available." Under the circumstances, those, Canningham feels that the system is probably the best solution, though not ideal. He believes that "if we abolish it, we will still have the problem: how are you going to sit down and talk to somebody?"

Dr. William A. Chaney, associate professor of history, further preferred the dual nature of the problem to the dualization of one problem of itself poses another problem.

Step Backward

A new leader often brings to his position a novel set of methods, ideals and goals. Thus a certain amount of toleration and sympathy should be extended to Dr. Curtis Tarr as he seeks to acquaint himself with Lawrence's social institutions and codes of conduct.

At the same time, however, it is important for a new college president to realize that the institution before him is not merely a business organization geared toward producing scholars by the most efficient method available. Rather it is a unique institution in which all spheres of life—including both the social and academic worlds—are conducted. Thus a reduction in the amount of freedom and individuality in one sphere will necessarily lead to a corresponding increase in the other, as the president seems to think, and can only detract from the long-range goal of a mature and restructured adulthood.

The Lawrentian has always supported any move which would place more responsibility in the hands of the individual while remaining within the necessary normative structure of the college. Thus it is our belief that the invitational open house program and the student honors dorm system are both beneficial to the college and the individual. Furthermore, any re-evaluation of the school's open dorm policy under the present circumstances is not only premature (since the program was set up only last April) but also usurps the prerogatives of the Faculty Committee on Student Life—which was created two years ago to handle such matters.

Therefore, it is our hope that Dr. Tarr will realize the responsible attitude of the student body in these matters and not discard such student liberties under the assumption that they distract from the individual's academic progress. The trend toward individual responsibility in the college's social norms is a step backward, not forward.

IAN FLEMING in all his tales of 007 could hardly have invented a more hideous henchman than the phantom of the Appleton sewage plant. In a matter of three evenings last summer, horrified, curious and frightened Appletonians were treated to a thing more repellent than a Goldfinger or Mr. Big. They saw a sewer monster.

The phantom was discovered on the morning of August 29, the next day, repercussions to the Appleton monster were felt. The police switchboard was flooded with calls from worried Appletonians. The police had barricaded the roads to the sewage plant for $350 per year, non-refundable. The plant is soon to be replaced. Perhaps the most interesting development concerned a visitor named Mrs. Paul Blob, a watchman at the sewage plant. She has the maids in terror. She is the latest in a long line of the public eye.

To the Editor:

Dear Editor:

I was appalled to find that today’s edition of the Lawrence Record contains an article prolific with errors. This is not the first time I have noticed such an error, and I believe that the students of Lawrence would benefit from an impartial and unbiased response to this issue.

Firstly, the article refers to the Lawrence Record as an "unnamed" paper. This is incorrect, as the Lawrence Record is a well-respected and widely-read publication.

Secondly, the article states that the Lawrence Record is "not a very good" newspaper. This is subjective and unfounded. The Lawrence Record is a reputable and respected publication, and its staff work hard to provide accurate and informative news.

I urge you to correct these errors and to improve the quality of your coverage.

Sincerely,

New Basketball Coach Stresses Fast Breaks

CLYDE RUSK from Urbana, Ill., comes to Lawrence this year with the hope of bolstering the Viking basketball team. Rush, with 15 years of coaching experience behind him, stresses the fast break type of basketball. Concerning the prospects for this year’s team he says, “Since I have no idea of our opposition I can’t say what I expect from our team. I do know that Ripon has a good squad and about all I can say is we’ll work hard and concentrate on the fast break. We might end up with a pretty fair team.”

Rush, who also encourages all boys—especially the ones with talent—who want to play basketball to come and talk to him personally.

Rush attended Urbana high school in Illinois, where he lettered in football and basketball. He received his bachelor’s degree at the University of Illinois.

The Lawrence sailing team, in its first fall intercollegiate sailing event, placed ninth out of 13 Big Ten and other midwestern schools. The regatta, sailed on tricky Lake Mendota in Madison on Oct-ober 5 and 6 was won by Marquette university.

Lawrence trailed the leading school by only 40 points through a 20-race schedule, indicating a very close match of the participating teams.

Equipment failure and unforeseen difficulties keeps Law-rence lower than expected in the final standings.

This was Lawrence's first and last regatta of the fall season while most of the other schools had tuned up for the spring regatta.

Lawrence will meet the Sig Eps club at Marquette as well as the Phi Taus and Beloit in Milwaukee this weekend.

LAWRENCE GRIDDERS practice for Saturday's meet-with Grinnell at Whiting field. The Vikes will be out to even their record at 2-2 before a Parents' day crowd.
